

POLAND

April 2002

Country Information and Policy Unit

I SCOPE OF DOCUMENT

II GEOGRAPHY

III HISTORY

IV STATE STRUCTURES

VA HUMAN RIGHTS ISSUES

VB HUMAN RIGHTS - SPECIFIC GROUPS

ANNEX A: POLITICAL ORGANISATIONS

ANNEX B: CHRONOLOGY OF KEY EVENTS

ANNEX C: PROMINENT PEOPLE

ANNEX D: REFERENCES TO SOURCE MATERIAL

1. SCOPE OF THE DOCUMENT

1.1 This assessment has been produced by the Country Information and Policy Unit, Immigration and Nationality Directorate, Home Office, from information obtained from a variety of sources.

1.2 The assessment has been prepared for background purposes for those involved in the asylum determination process. The information it contains is not exhaustive, nor is it intended to catalogue all human rights violations. It concentrates on the issues most commonly raised in asylum claims made in the United Kingdom.

1.3 The assessment is sourced throughout. It is intended to be used by caseworkers as a signpost to the source material, which has been made available to them. The vast majority of the source material is readily available in the public domain.

1.4 It is intended to revise the assessment on a 6 monthly basis while the country remains within the top 35 asylum producing countries in the United Kingdom.

1.5 An electronic copy of the assessment has been made available to the following organisations:

Amnesty International UK

Immigration Advisory Service

Immigration Appellate Authority

Immigration Law Practitioners' Association

Joint Council for the Welfare of Immigrants

JUSTICE

Medical Foundation for the Care of Victims of Torture

Refugee Council

Refugee Legal Centre

UN High Commissioner for Refugees

2. Geography

2.1 The Republic of Poland is situated in central Europe. It is bounded to the north by the Baltic Sea and an enclave of the Russian Federation; to the north-east by Lithuania; to the east by Belarus; to the south-east by Ukraine; to the west by Germany; and to the south by the Czech Republic and Slovakia. [1b]

2.2 Poland is the largest and most populous state in central Europe. It covers an area of 120,728 square miles (312,685 square kilometres), with an estimated population, in December 2000, of 38,644,000. The capital of Poland is Warszawa (Warsaw). It is situated in the east of the country and has an estimated population of 1,628,500 (as at 31 December 1996). Other major cities include Lodz (population 818,000), a major industrial centre, and Krakow (pop. 741,000). [1b]

2.3 The official language of the country is Polish which is spoken by almost all of the population, although there is also a small German-speaking community. The national flag consists of two equal horizontal stripes of white and red. [1b]

2.4 Following a major reform of the structure of local government which became effective on 1 January 1999, there is a three-tier territorial division of the country.

Poland is now divided into:

- 16 voivodships (provinces)
- 308 land powiats (counties, or districts) and 65 urban powiats
- 2,489 gminas (communes, or municipalities). [54]

The Economy

2.5 Economic growth slowed in 2001, under the influence of a very tight monetary policy and slower growth in the EU. Real GDP growth for 2001 was 1.1%, compared with 4.1% for 2000. [33f]

2.6 According to the Central Statistical Office (GUS), the unemployment rate reached 17.4% in December 2001, up from 15.1% in December 2000 and an average of 12.0% in 1999. The number of registered unemployed stood at 3.1 million, the highest level since the introduction of the current measurement system in 1989. The government has identified reducing unemployment as a priority. [55] On 27 February 2002 the Labour Minister announced that 1 billion zlotys (approx $240 million) will be spent on a programme to counter unemployment in 2002. [8w]

2.7 Agriculture employs 28% of the workforce but contributes only 3.4% of GDP. Farms are generally small and fragmented and over 40% of all farmers in Poland produce only for their own needs. Almost 70% of all farms are below eight hectares. Pressure to restructure the agriculture sector is intensifying as Poland prepares for accession to the EU, which is unwilling to subsidise the vast number of subsistence farms that do not produce for the market. Poland's industrial base now includes fertilisers, petrochemicals, passenger vehicles, machine tools, electrical machinery, electronics and shipbuilding. [4b][4d]

2.8 Poland's regions are polarised, with areas of relative wealth, especially around Warsaw and Gdansk, and poor areas concentrated in the East, on the border with the Ukraine. Infrastructure is especially weak in the East, and EU assistance (and, once Poland joins, Structural Funds) is intended to improve this area. [38]

3. HISTORY

Recent Political History

3.1 Poland, partitioned in the 18th century, was declared an independent republic on 11 November 1918. The country was ruled by an autocratic and military regime from 1926 until 1939. In that year Poland was invaded by both Germany and the USSR and partitioned between them. After Germany declared war on the USSR in June 1941, its forces occupied the whole of Poland. [1a]

3.2 After the war, the pro-Communist Polish Committee of National Liberation, established under Soviet auspices in July 1944, was transformed into the provisional government. [1a]

3.3 Non-communist political groups suffered severe intimidation during the falsified January 1947 elections, and the communist-led "democratic bloc" claimed an overwhelming victory and Poland effectively became a one-party state. [1a]

3.4 Throughout the communist period the majority of Poles remained strongly anti-Communist. Serious anti-regime riots occurred in the 1950s and 1970s. Further strikes in the summer of 1980 led to the birth of Solidarity under the leadership of Lech Walesa. Solidarity's demands for legislative reform, including the recognition of basic rights, were seen as a threat by the government, and on 13 December 1981, under heavy pressure from the Soviet Union and the Warsaw Pact, the Prime Minister, General Wojciech Jaruzelski introduced martial law. Walesa and many other Solidarity leaders were interned. Martial law was lifted in July 1983 under pressure from the West. [1a]

3.5 Some limited liberalisation occurred in the next few years, but by 1988, as new strikes were starting, Poland had reached an impasse; the economy was collapsing and the government was discredited, unable to run the country. The government finally agreed to Round Table talks, which in April 1989, legalised Solidarity and instituted political reforms, in return for support for unpopular economic measures. [1a]

3.6 Elections were held in 1989, 1991 and 1992 leading to a wide range of political parties in the legislature. A total of 29 parties won representation to the Sejm in 1991. The party with the largest number of deputies, 62, was Mazowiecki's Democratic Union (UD - Unia Demokratyczne), formed in May 1991 by the merger of the Citizens' Movement Democratic Action (ROAD - Ruch Obywatelski Akcja Demokratyczna) and two other organisations. The Democratic Left Alliance (SLD - Sojusz Lewicy Demokratycznej), an electoral coalition of the Social Democracy of the Republic of Poland (SdRP - Socjal demokracja Rzeczypospolitej) and the All Poland Trade Unions Alliance, won 60 seats. In the Senate (the Upper House) the UD was also the largest single party. [1a]

3.7 In early June 1996 some 25 centre-right political parties, including Solidarity, the Centre Alliance and the Christian National Union (ZChN - Zjednoczenie Chrzescijansko Narodowe), established an electoral coalition, called Solidarity Election Action (AWS - Akcja wyborcza Solidarnosc), in preparation for the 1997 parliamentary elections. [1a]

3.8 On 2 April 1997, after four years of parliamentary negotiations, the National Assembly adopted a new Constitution, which was approved by a national referendum in May and came into force in October.

1997 Parliamentary Election

3.9 Parliamentary elections were held on 21 September 1997, and an alliance of post-Solidarity parties, the Solidarity Election Action group (AWS), won approximately one third of the vote. It formed a coalition government with the liberal, pro-free market Freedom Union (UW). Jerzy Buzek of the AWS was appointed Prime Minister and the UW leader, Leszek Balcerowicz, was appointed Deputy Prime Minister and Finance Minister. [1a]

3.10 The results of the general election are as follows: [1a]

Party	% of votes	Number of seats
Solidarity Election Action (AWS)	33.8	201
Democratic Left Alliance (SLD)	27.1	164
Freedom Union (UW)	13.4	60
Polish Peasant Party (PSL)	7.3	27
Movement for the Reconstruction of Poland (ROP)	5.6	6
Union of Labour (UP)	4.7	-
National Pensioners' Party (KPEiR)	2.2	-
German Minority of Lower Silesia	0.4	2
Others	5.5	-
Total	100	460

3.11 The new government prioritised rapid integration with NATO and the EU, accelerated privatisation and the reform of government structures and pledged to promote Christian and family values. The major social reforms undertaken by the government included health, education and pensions. Opposition to government policies such as restructuring of provinces (voivodships) and districts (powiats) and to industrial restructuring was reflected in strikes and protests throughout 1998. Other government measures in 1998 included the adoption of a new penal code to conform to EU criteria, which brought about the abolition of the death penalty and granting access to files compiled on citizens during the Communist era. [1a]

3.12 In March 1999 Prime Minister Buzek reshuffled his government in preparation for a major reform of state administration which took place in April. [1a]

3.13 On 28 May 2000 the ruling council of the Freedom Union (UW) voted to withdraw its ministers from the cabinet. The five ministers concerned handed in their resignations the following day and the UW called for the appointment of a new prime minister and for stricter voting discipline among the AWS deputies. This development happened after weeks of disputes between the UW and the AWS. Buzek refused to accept the resignations and called for the ministers to remain in post pending talks on the formation of a new coalition. [17d]

3.14 The coalition agreement collapsed on 6 June 2000 after weeks of negotiations between the AWS and the UW failed to find a mutually acceptable alternative to Buzek as Prime Minister. There were also differences between the free-market UW and the trade union backed AWS on spending levels and the speed of reforms. The AWS formed a minority government on 6 June 2000, with Buzek remaining as prime minister. [17e]

3.15 On 11 September 2000, President Kwasniewski vetoed a property enfranchisement bill which had been approved by both the Sejm and the Senate. The bill would have offered every Polish citizen a share of state assets, including state-owned apartments and land. A subsequent attempt to override the presidential veto failed in the Sejm on 13 October, when the three-fifths majority required for this could not be achieved. [17g]

3.16 Aleksander Kwasniewski was re-elected President on 8 October 2000, with a majority large enough to obviate the need for a second round of voting. AWS leader Marian Krzaklewski received 15.6% of the popular vote:

Candidate	% of vote
Aleksander Kwasniewski	53.9
Andrej Olechowski	17.3
Marian Krzaklewski	15.6
Jarosl�w Kalinowski	6.0
Others	7.2

Turnout: 61%

Source: State Electoral Commission

Former President Lech Walesa, who had finished a close second to Kwasniewski in the previous presidential election, obtained only 1% of the vote on this occasion and announced on 15 October that he was withdrawing from politics. [17f]

3.17 The Freedom Union (UW) suffered a damaging split at its December 2000 party congress, convened to elect a successor to Leszek Balcerowicz, who had been nominated as president of the National Bank of Poland. Balcerowicz had done much to hold together the UW's two main factions: a social democratic wing, comprising mainly former members of the Democratic Union, and a 'neo-liberal' faction, primarily made up of former members of the Congress of Liberal Democrats (KLD). Members identifying with the neo-liberal faction became disaffected after their candidate for the leadership, Donald Tusk, was defeated by former foreign minister Bronislaw Geremek and Mr Geremek's allies gained all but two seats on the party's 100-member national council. Tusk subsequently left the party to co-found the Civic Platform (see 3.18), drawing away several hundred UW members. [33b]

3.18 The Civic Platform (Platforma Obywatelska - PO), a liberal-conservative political movement, was formed in January 2001 by Andrzej Olechowski (runner-up in the 2000 presidential election), Sejm speaker Maciej Plazynski from the AWS, and deputy Senate speaker Donald Tusk, who departed from the Freedom Union (UW). They were joined by several hundred former members of the Freedom Union throughout Poland, including Warsaw mayor Pawel Piskorski and former prime minister Jan Krzysztof Bielecki. Several deputies left the UW parliamentary group and chose to sit as independents instead of immediately forming a parliamentary group for the PO. The founders had stated on 11 January that they intended to put up candidates for the 2001 parliamentary election, and probably convert the PO into a political party thereafter. [33b][30e]

3.19 On 18 March 2001, the council of the Conservative Peasant Party (SKL) voted to withdraw the SKL from the ruling AWS coalition. By May 2000 the AWS held 154 seats in the Sejm, compared with 201 after the 1997 election. [39]

September 2001 Parliamentary Elections

3.20 Elections to both the Sejm and the Senate were held on 23 September 2001. The following were the principle parties/coalitions which contested the elections:

- The Democratic Left Alliance (SLD), under Leszek Miller, had formed a centre-left electoral coalition with Labour Union (UP). Their campaign focussed on stability, economic growth, fighting unemployment, and modernising education, and sought to project an image of competent and business-like leadership. The SLD is firmly committed to EU accession.
- Solidarity Election Action -Right (AWS-P): Prime Minister Jerzy Buzek's AWS government had, by the time of the election, lost a great deal of its former public support due mainly to its apparent ineffectiveness in countering a dramatic slowdown in the economy and the unpopularity of the four major socio-political reforms it introduced - in addition to a recent damaging corruption scandal. In May 2001, AWS and part of the Movement for the Reconstruction of Poland (ROP) had agreed to run on a joint list in the parliamentary elections: 'AWS-P'.
- Freedom Union (UW) had withdrawn from the governing coalition in June 2000.

The party had suffered a damaging split in December 2000 and members in its liberal faction left to co-found Civic Platform (PO).

- Civic Platform (PO): Formed in January 2001 and positioned as a pro-free market political movement in the liberal centre of Polish politics.(see 3.18)
- Law & Justice (PiS), under former Justice Minister Lech Kaczynski, was formed to contest the 23 September elections. PiS is basically a 'law and order' party. Its candidates included many former AWS politicians.
- Samoobrona (Self-Defence): Populist, Euro-sceptic organisation led by Andrzej Lepper. As one of three farmers' unions, Samoobrona staged disruptive protests and roadblocks in the late-1990's against the government's European and agricultural policies. Adopted a more formal political structure in the lead up to the elections, and now also sought to be seen as the voice of the urban unemployed and of small business, in addition to Poland's hard-pressed farmers.
- Polish Peasant Party (PSL): Left-wing party competing with Samoobrona for support in the rural community. In favour of EU accession, but opposed to the tough, far-reaching agricultural reforms required by Brussels.
- League of Polish Family (LPR) : Formed two months before the elections, the LPR groups far-right nationalist politicians - including several close to Radio Maryja, an ultra-nationalist Catholic radio station.
- Bloc Senat 2001: A centre-right coalition of Civic Platform, Law & Justice, AWS, Freedom Union and Reconstruction Party candidates (all post-Solidarity parties) - formed to contest the Senate election only.

[40b,44a,45a,38]

Results in the Sejm:

PARTY/COALITION	DESCRIPTION	% of TOTAL VOTE	SEATS
Coalition of the Alliance of the Democratic Left and the Union of Labour (SLD-UP)	Centre-left	41.0	216
Civic Platform (PO)	Centre-right	12.7	65
Samoobrona (Self Defence)	Populist/agrarian	10.2	53
Law & Justice (PiS)	Right/anti-corruption	9.5	44
Polish Peasant Party (PSL)	Left/agrarian	9.0	42
League of Polish Family (LPR)	Right/nationalist	7.9	38
Solidarity Election Action (AWS-P)	Centre-right	5.6	-
Freedom Union (UW)	Centre-right	3.1	-
German Minority (MN)		-	2*
		100.0	460

[43][38] *German minority guaranteed at least two seats

Results in the Senate:

PARTY/COALITION	DESCRIPTION	SEATS
Coalition of the Alliance of the Democratic Left and the Union of Labour (SLD-UP)	Centre-left	75
Blok Senat (includes PO , PiS , AWS-P , UW)	Centre-right	15
Polish Peasant Party (PSL)	Left/agrarian	4
Samoobrona	Populist/agrarian	2
League of Polish Family (LPR)	Right/nationalist	2
Others/Non-affiliated		2
		100

[43][38]

3.21 In the Sejm election SLD-UP, with 216 seats, fell 15 seats short of an outright majority. The parties that had formed the previous government after the 1997 election - Solidarity Election Action and Freedom Union - both failed to gain sufficient support to qualify for any seats. Extremist parties Samoobrona and LPR gained a higher percentage of the vote than had generally been predicted.

3.22 SLD-UP leader Leszek Miller reportedly held discussions with several other parties on the possibility of a coalition or working agreement, though he also had the option of forming a minority government. Civic Platform (PO) had already publicly rejected the idea of a coalition with SLD. After much internal debate, members of the Polish Peasant Party (PSL) voted on 6 October to enter into a coalition with the SLD and UP in the Sejm. [10f]

3.23 On 9 October 2001, leaders Leszek Miller of the Democratic Left Alliance (SLD), Marek Pol of the Union of Labour (UP), and Jaroslaw Kalinowski of the Polish Peasants' Party (PSL), signed a policy agreement which was to be the basis of a coalition government. [8v]

3.24 Leszek Miller formally notified the President of his future Cabinet on 10 October,, which included the leaders of the UP and PSL as deputy prime ministers (see Annex C). The new government formally assumed office when the Sejm convened on 19 October. On the same date, Marek Borowski of the SLD was elected Speaker of the Sejm; Samoobrona leader Lepper became one of the four deputy Speakers. [8u][46a]

3.25 In addressing the Senate on 19 October, the President Kwasniewski stressed the importance of this second chamber: "The Senate has exceptional prerogatives that distinguish it against the other organs of state authority: It is a place where the law can be modified and improved". (In its pre-election campaign, SLD-UP had positioned itself in favour of abolishing the Senate.) In the same speech, the President observed that the new government "faces the biggest challenges since 1989", particularly in the changed world following the events of 11 September. [8t][24d][24f]

3.26 On 29 November 2001, the Sejm voted to dismiss Andrzej Lepper, leader of the populist Samoobrona movement, from his post as deputy Speaker of the Sejm, after he made an inflammatory insult to the Foreign Minister amidst criticism of the Government's EU negotiating positions. During the dismissal procedure, Lepper went on to make a stream of corruption allegations against several well known politicians, including two cabinet ministers and senior members of the opposition Civic Platform (PO). The allegations were denied. Nevertheless, it was announced the following day that the Prosecutor's office in Warsaw had opened an investigation to establish whether Lepper's accusations were legal and true. [30f][8x] On 28 January 2002 the Sejm stripped Lepper of his immunity from prosecution, thus exposing him to criminal charges for slander and accusations of corruption levelled against ministers and members of parliament, as well as the central bank governor. [45b] On 30 January, the Appeal Court in Gdansk sentenced Lepper to a fine of 20,000 zloty; he had been found guilty by the District Court in May 2001 of insulting the President and two former deputy ministers at a press conference in 1999. [8b] In March 2002 the Regional Court in Slubice sentenced Lepper to a year in prison, conditionally suspended, as well as a fine, for organising an illegal blockade of a border crossing in 1999. The sentence is subject to appeal. [26b] In an interview with the Financial Times in 2001, Lepper had admitted that there were 130 criminal charges outstanding against him. [45b]

European Union and NATO

3.27 Poland signed an association agreement with the European Community in December 1991 as part of its continuing effort to integrate more closely with western European institutions. In April 1994 Poland made a formal application for membership of the European Union. In January 1997 Poland's European Integration Committee adopted a National Integration Strategy outlining the economic, security and legal reforms deemed necessary to ensure full membership of the EU. Formal accession negotiations began in March 1998; by April 2002, Poland had provisionally closed negotiations on 23 of the 29 chapters of the acquis communautaire (the body of EU law). The SLD is strongly committed to EU accession, and its coalition partners, UP and PSL, agreed in October 2001 that accession would be one of the key goals of the new government. [1a][40b][38]

3.28 In June 2001 the European Union agreed on a common position with regard to the free movement of persons. There will be a period of transition of up to seven years after enlargement during which freedom of movement may be restricted by current EU members: During the first two years, nationals of the new member states would not have a right to work one of the fifteen current member states; for the next three years, existing member states can individually apply national measures to restrict employment rights; they can then extend these restrictions for a further two years, up to a total of seven years, if there remains a serious threat to their domestic labour markets. [60]

3.29 According to two opinion surveys conducted in February-March 2002, a majority of Poles remain in favour of EU membership. [33h]

3.30 In January 1994 Poland announced that it was to join NATO's Partnership for Peace programme. A defence co-operation agreement was signed between Poland and NATO in March 1994. Poland, along with the Czech Republic and Hungary, gained full membership of NATO in March 1999. [1a]

4. STATE STRUCTURES

The Polish Constitution

4.1 A new permanent Polish Constitution, to replace the much amended and supplemented Communist Constitution of 1952, was adopted by the National Assembly on 2 April 1997 and endorsed by popular referendum on 25 May of that year. It came into force on 17 October 1997 following the Supreme Court's ruling on the validity of the referendum. [1b]

4.2 The full text of the Constitution appears with the Source material accompanying this assessment. [50]

4.3 Article 32 provides that all persons shall be equal before the law, and all persons shall have the right to equal treatment by public authorities. No one shall be discriminated against in political, social or economic life for any reason whatsoever. [50]

4.4 The Constitution (Article 79) provides that anyone whose constitutional rights or freedoms have been infringed has the right to appeal to the Constitutional Tribunal [50]

Political System

4.5 Legislative power is vested in the bicameral National Assembly (Zgromadzenie Narodowe), which is elected for a four year term. It comprises the 100 member Senat (upper chamber) and 460 member Sejm (lower chamber). The Senate reviews the laws adopted by the Sejm and may propose their amendment or rejection. [1a]

4.6 Senators and deputies are elected by universal, direct suffrage. In the Sejm, deputies are elected under a system of proportional representation. [1a] The electoral law exempts ethnic minority parties from the requirement to win 5% of the vote nation-wide in order to qualify for seats in individual districts. [4a]

4.7 Executive power is vested in the President of the Republic, who is directly elected for a five year term, and may be re-elected only once; and in the appointed Council of Ministers (Cabinet), led by the Prime Minister. The President is empowered to veto legislation; a three-fifths majority in the Sejm is subsequently required to overturn a presidential veto. The Council of Ministers is responsible to the Sejm [1a]

4.8 A law compelling political leaders to reveal past collaboration with Communist era secret police, the "lustracja" or vetting/lustration law, took effect in August 1997. The law requires candidates for high government office, including those for President, the Sejm, the Senate, Prime Minister, or other office that requires nomination by the President or Prime Minister, to sign a declaration stating whether or not they co-operated with Poland's secret services at any time between 1944 and 1990. Although the law does not provide for the punishment of those who admit to collaboration, any Sejm or Senate candidate found to have lied in his or her declaration will be removed from office. Any other government official found to have made false statements will also be excluded from public office for 10 years. The vetting court held its first hearing on 24 February 1999 and the Justice Minister sacked two prosecutors in the wake of the first vetting list. [8d][8h]

Local Government

4.9 Under the administrative structure which came into force on 1 January 1999, powers were devolved to three levels of self-government:

- There are 16 voivodships (provinces). Voivodship authorities include the sejmik, the voivodship parliament chosen in local government elections, and the board of the voivodship. The voivodship is responsible for matters related to regional development.
- At district, or county, level there are 308 land powiats and 65 urban powiats. The powiat council is elected in local government elections; the powiat board is the executive authority. Powiats are responsible for such matters as social security, maintenance of general hospitals, public order and public security, secondary and technical schools, consumer rights, fire protection, issuing of passports, matters relating to change of citizenship, and measures to counteract unemployment.
- The gmina (commune or municipality) is the basic unit of territorial division. There are 2,489 gminas. The gmina council is chosen in local elections, while the gmina board has executive power. Responsibilities include primary schools and kindergartens, social housing, local transport, water and other public utilities, leisure and cultural facilities, local police, and public health (excluding hospitals). [54][61]

4.10 Local elections took place on 11 October 1998. The AWS won 10,613 of the contested 63,765 seats, followed by the SLD (8,840 seats), the PS Social Alliance (4,583), the UW (1,146), the Ojczyzna Movement (256) and Rodzina Polska (151). The SLD gained control of 8 of the 16 provinces, while the AWS won 6. Voter turnout was only 45% but in a number of provinces the turn out was less than 20%. These were the first elections since the reform of local administration which included a reduction in the number of voivodships from 49 to 16. [17c]

4.11 Municipal council elections were held in Warsaw in September 2000, resulting in the Democratic Left Alliance (SLD) holding 39 of the 80 seats on the council; the AWS now has 27 seats and the Freedom Union (UW) 13 seats. Prime Minister Jerzy Buzek had effectively dissolved the Council in May 2000 after the UW had formed a coalition with the SLD in Warsaw, leading to the collapse of Poland's ruling coalition between the AWS and the UW in June. [10e]

Citizenship

4.12 Principles of citizenship are governed by the Polish Constitution and the Citizenship Act of 1962. [48][49]

4.13 Generally, a child - irrespective of where he/she is born - acquires Polish citizenship if both parents are Polish citizens or, subject to certain provisions, if one parent is a Polish citizen. A child who is born in Poland would acquire Polish citizenship if his/her parents are unknown, or are of unknown nationality, or are stateless. [49]

4.14 Persons can apply for citizenship through naturalisation after residing in Poland for 5 years, subject to having a basic command of the Polish language and basic knowledge of Polish history. The Senate passed an amendment to the Citizenship Act in July 2000 to recognise dual nationality. The Constitution prohibits involuntary loss of Polish citizenship. [8r][49]

4.15 On 29 June 2000, a new Polish Citizenship bill was approved by the Sejm, but subsequently rejected in the Senate. A new draft of the bill was introduced in the Sejm on 27 April 2001, but had not yet been approved when Parliament dissolved prior to the September elections. [48]

The Judiciary

4.16 The Constitution provides for an independent judiciary and the Government respects this in practice. However the judiciary remains inefficient and lacks resources and public confidence. [4c]

4.17 There is a four-tier court system, consisting of regional, provincial and appellate divisions as well as a Supreme Court. These tiers are sub-divided into five parts: military, civil, criminal, labour and family. Regional courts are courts of first instance, while appellate courts are charged solely with appeals. Provincial courts have a dual responsibility, handling appeals from regional courts while enjoying original jurisdiction for the most serious types of offences. Appellate courts handle appeals tried at the provincial level and the Supreme Court handles appeals about questions of law. The prosecutorial system mirrors the court structure with national, provincial, appellate and regional offices. [4c]

4.18 The Constitutional Tribunal (Court) rules on the constitutionality of legislation; its decisions are final and binding. [4c]

4.19 Criminal cases are tried in regional and provincial courts by a professional judge and two lay assessors. The seriousness of the offence determines which is the court of first instance. All defendants are presumed innocent until proven guilty. At the end of a trial, the court renders its decision orally and then has seven days to prepare a written decision. A defendant has the right to lodge an appeal within 14 days of the written decision. [4c] In 1996 reforms were made that provide for a two-level appeal process in most civil and criminal matters; previously, citizens enjoyed access only to a one-step appeal process. [16e][4a]

4.20 Trials are normally public. The court, however, reserves the right to close a trial to the public in some circumstances, such as divorce cases; trials in which state secrets may be disclosed, or cases whose content might offend 'public morality'. The courts rarely invoke this prerogative. [4a]

4.21 In January 2000, a new layer of jurisdiction was introduced to deal with petty cases. It is planned to set up 400 civil-criminal chambers throughout the country (254 were in place by November 2001), which are competent for civil claims below 5000 Zloty, consumer rights cases, and fiscal offences carrying a maximum penalty of up to two years imprisonment. [27c][27d]

4.22 Judges are nominated by the National Judicial Council and appointed by the President. Judges are appointed to the bench for life and may be reassigned but not dismissed, except by a court decision. [4c]

4.23 The court system is said to be cumbersome, poorly administered, overstaffed and under funded. There are numerous inefficiencies, and these factors contribute to a lack of public confidence. Court decisions are frequently not implemented. Simple civil cases can take as long as 2-3 years before resolution, and pre-trial waiting time in criminal cases can be several months. The backlog and the costs of legal action appear to deter many citizens from using the justice system at all, particularly for civil cases such as divorce, as observed by the Ombudsman in his report for 2000. [4c][27d]

4.24 Commenting on the judiciary in its reports of November 1998 and October 1999, the EU Commission considered that the difficulties and constraints identified in the Commission's Opinion [29] remained a challenge. These referred to failure to improve the lengthy average time for processing court cases, the enforcement of court rulings and access to the courts. However, the November 2000 report noted an overall improvement in the efficiency of the court system - with the exception of Warsaw. The average duration of a criminal/correctional procedure is 6 months nation-wide, but 40 months in Warsaw, where the situation is still 'very critical in terms of overburdening of judges and long delays'. [27a,b,c] The November 2001 Report noted further progress in improving the functioning the judiciary, including amending legislation, an increase in the number of judges and prosecutors, and further computerisation. The implementation of these measures appears to have already contained - but not reduced - the overall backlog of cases so far, but the situation in Warsaw remains more difficult than for the country as a whole. In some categories of civil cases, however, the average duration of the legal procedure has been reduced. [27d]

4.25 In 2000, the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg ruled on two cases involving the right to fair trial within reasonable time (Article 6 of ECHR). The European Court awarded damages to the plaintiffs whose civil cases had not been resolved in the Polish courts after four and a half years, and five years, respectively. [9b] During 2001, the Court of Human Rights found that Poland had breached Article 6[1] (determination of civil rights within a reasonable time) in at least six cases. [62a][62b][62c][62d]

4.26 Access to courts and other organs of court administration is regulated by legal Acts which give no grounds for differentiating between people on account of their race, or national or ethnic origin. [16d]

4.27 The European Commission notes that concerns about corruption within the judiciary persist, but that to some extent there is a divergence between perception and reality. Various reports suggest that some 20 cases were reported in 2000, while the Central Bureau of Investigation indicated that only 3 cases were investigated that year. [27d]

4.28 The Supreme Court ruled in September 2000 that judges would not require a special security clearance in order to gain access to classified State secrets, as is the normal requirement under the Classified Information Act of March 1999. [9b]

4.29 A new Penal Code and Code of Penal Procedures adapted to conform to European Convention on Human Rights standards entered into force on 1 September 1998. The new code replaced capital punishment with life or 25 years' imprisonment. A number of other significant changes were made which serve to reduce the age limit for prosecution of minors on serious offences (15), to reduce the minimum period of detention (1 month), to reduce the maximum punishment threshold for certain serious offences and to increase penalties for serious crimes. The Code also introduced new categories of criminal offences (e.g. computer and environmental crime). [27a][27b]

4.30 The Polish legal system contains legal measures to guarantee the observance of Article 7 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and of the regulations of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, adopted by the General Assembly of the United Nations on 10 December 1984 (Journal of Laws 1989, No.63, items 378 and 379). [16e]

Military Service

4.31 Article 85 of the Constitution states that it is "the duty of every Polish citizen to defend the Homeland". It adds: "Any citizen whose religious convictions or moral principles do not allow him to perform military service may be obliged to perform substitute service in accordance with the principles specified by statute". [50] The present legal basis of conscription is the 1967 Law on the Universal Duty to Defend the Polish Republic. [12b]

4.32 All male citizens between the ages of 18 and 28 are liable for military service. [31] This includes members of ethnic minority groups, e.g. Roma. [18] The duration of military service was reduced to 12 months in March 1999. Deferral (postponement) is available to full- and part-time students and on the basis of special regulations on 'difficult life circumstances'. [24e] Exemption is possible for medical and certain domestic reasons. Under the Law reservist obligations apply up to the age of 60, but in practice no one is called up for reserve training. [31]

4.33 The duration of alternative service for conscientious objectors is 21 months.[24e] In 1998 it was estimated that alternative service had been granted to approximately 60 per cent of applicants. Such service is most commonly performed in health care institutions, in social care, or in working for local/municipal authorities. [25] A person eligible for alternative service does not return to armed military service if no jobs in an alternative service field are available at the time - this person automatically obtains a deferment of substitute service until alternative jobs are available. [51a]

4.34 Refusal to perform military service or to carry out a task inherent in such service, in peacetime, are punishable by 6 months' to 5 years' imprisonment. [31]

4.35 Amnesty International, in their report covering the period January - December 2000, drew attention to the problem of ill-treatment (humiliation) of new recruits in the armed forces, mainly by older conscripts and non-commissioned officers. [56a] The Polish authorities have stated that bullying (fala) is not tolerated, and that such crimes against human dignity are vigorously prosecuted by the Chief Military Prosecutor's Office. By May 2000, a total of 134 soldiers had been charged with fala. [16h]

Internal Security

4.36 Internal security forces consist of local police, a national office of investigation and city guards, who are uniformed, unarmed officers. Both the internal security and armed forces are subject to effective civilian control by the government. [4c]

4.37 The European Commission's Report of November 2001 noted that there had been concerns about degrading treatment by the police. The Report stated, however, that there was no evidence of such treatment being either systematic or systemic, though human rights groups had expressed concern about lenient punishments given to police officers where mistreatment had taken place. [27d]

4.38 The Polish delegation to the UN Committee against Torture reported in May 2000 that: " Systematic action was being taken to address unlawful behaviour by police officers. New psychological tests had been included in the recruitment procedure. An average of 80 per cent of candidates applying for service in recent months had been rejected on psycho-physical grounds. Training programmes were continuously adjusted in the light of analyses of major human rights abuses involving law enforcement officers. A police code of conduct had been formulated on the basis of United Nations recommendations. It stressed the need to respect human rights and the dignity of the individual. Almost 60 per cent of police officers were young recruits who had entered the force after 1990 and who had a positive attitude to human rights training"... "Training courses for law enforcement officers at all levels placed considerable emphasis on education and information about human rights, particularly the unlawfulness of torture and cruel or degrading treatment." [16h]

4.39 The Polish delegation to CAT described the police control and complaints system as follows: " All law enforcement agencies [have] an extensive control and review system that operated on several different levels. A complaint could be filed against a police officer through the legally sanctioned channels to his or her commanding officer, whose decision could be appealed against at successive levels up to and including the Commander-in-Chief. Secondly, members of the public could use a toll-free telephone number [...] to complain of police abuses of authority. The information is analysed by an internal police department and could lead to the filing of criminal charges. Thirdly, a complaint could be filed directly with the competent prosecutor's office, which conducted its investigations independently of the police force. Fourthly, the Ministry of Internal Affairs had established the office of Spokesperson for Victims' Rights, a mediator who operated independently of the Police and Border Police, co-operated closely with NGOs and could react immediately to complaints by victims of criminal acts, perpetrated in some cases by the police. A similar service [is] performed by the Civic Rights Ombudsman, an institution that had been in existence for over ten years. Watchdog functions are also exercised by NGOs such as the Helsinki Committee, Amnesty International and minority rights organisations, and by the free media. There had been no recorded attempt to prevent the media from disclosing information that tarnished the image of the law enforcement agencies. On the contrary, media publicity had often led to changes in the agencies concerned." [16h]

4.40 The Chairman's Office of the Main Headquarters of Police in Warsaw has advised that, where a complaint is upheld, the complainant receives an apology personally or in writing. In cases which result in damage to health or material loss, the police pay damages. Additionally, a policeman who is found guilty of a breach of discipline is liable to service or criminal responsibility. [19]

4.41 The British Government's Know How Fund Polish Police Programme of Assistance commenced in 1990. The Fund was in existence for over 8 years and its aim was to provide constructive assistance through the transfer of experience from the British police to aid the Polish police to come to terms with the policing needs of a newly formed democracy. The aim was also to help in the development of a police organisation capable of dealing with the crime and social problems which had emerged since the breakdown of the totalitarian state. The Polish police have reportedly made considerable progress in most of the key areas which are the cornerstone of professional policing. [23][38]

4.42 The International Helsinki Federation for Human Rights and the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance have expressed concerns about police conduct. There were some reports that the police did not react appropriately to racially motivated crime; that they responded slowly and their investigations were inadequate. The 1999 ECRI Report also noted allegations of police violence and abuse directed at members of the Roma community. The Polish authorities have responded to the ECRI report by stating that, in all cases of reported crimes against Romanies, active efforts were launched immediately to clarify the circumstances of the offences and to identify the offenders. They also noted that reported cases of police officers violating regulations or breaking the law are monitored and subject to disciplinary proceedings. Police officers found to have committed violations against criminal suspects have been punished severely - from disciplinary discharge to prosecution and conviction in a court of law. [3]

4.43 In February 2002 the Cabinet approved a draft bill restructuring the Polish intelligence services. It proposes dividing functions among three agencies, as follows: the Intelligence Agency (AW) will incorporate both military and civilian intelligence functions; the Internal Security Agency (ABW) will have a civilian counterintelligence brief, expected to focus on terrorism and organised crime; and the former counterintelligence section of army intelligence (WSI), which will deal with military and defence industry security issues. The current head of the secret service has recommended that AW and ABW be headed by a politician rather than a civil servant. The draft bill has yet to go before the Sejm. [30j]

Legal Rights/Detention

4.44 The Polish Constitution prohibits arbitrary arrest and detention and the government generally observes this prohibition. Courts rather than prosecutors issue arrest warrants. The law allows a 48 hour detention period before authorities are required to bring a defendant before a court and an additional 24 hours for the court to decide whether to issue a pre-trial detention order. During this period access to a lawyer is normally limited. Once a prosecutor presents the legal basis for a formal investigation the law provides for access to counsel. Bail is available and most detainees are released on bail pending trial. The law provides that detainees may be held in pre-trial detention for up to 3 months and may challenge the legality of an arrest through appeal to the district court; a court may extend this pre-trial confinement period every 3 months for up to 18 months until the trial date. The total time of temporary arrest until the first sentence rendered by the court of lower instance may not be more than two years. However, under certain circumstances, the two-year period may be extended further by the Supreme Court. [4c]

4.45 On at least two occasions in 2001, the European Court of Human Rights ruled in favour of Polish nationals who had brought cases under ECHR Article 5 (right to liberty and security), on the basis of the length of time they had spent on remand. Both applicants were awarded damages. [62a][62b]

4.46 Article 40 of the 1982 Act on the Promotion of Sobriety provided that 'a person in a state of drunkenness, who by his/her behaviour causes a scandal in a public place or workplace, or is in a situation in which his/her life is threatened, or constitutes a threat to other peoples' lives or health', may be brought to a sobering-up centre or public health care facility. [9b] A number of observers had expressed concerns about the system, with regard to the rights of detainees, mistreatment of foreigners and lack of access to a lawyer. [27d] In April 2000, the European Court of Human Rights ruled that in the particular case of a 54 year old man who was only "moderately" drunk and was put in a sobering-up centre for six hours after causing a scene at a post office, the police had used excessive means, as the man was neither a threat to himself or to others and could simply have been driven home. [9b]. The law on sobriety which was adopted in July 2001 amended the system. It provides for a right of complaint and a requirement of notification of detention, elements intended to reduce the abuse of the system. [27d]

Prisons and Prison Conditions

4.47 According to reports by NGOs, prison conditions are generally poor. Overcrowding, damp cells and a lack of medical treatment are described as the main problems. The prison system is in urgent need of additional funding; the National Penitentiary Authority's budget has declined since 1999. The Ombudsman for Human Rights has complained about the safety of prisoners, noting that inmates are often the victims of violence from other prisoners. [4c]

4.48 Overcrowding has been a problem. In mid-2000 the prison population of 70,000 was 110% of the notional maximum capacity of the system; this figure was often exceeded in large urban prisons. [27c] The total number of prisoners apparently further increased in 2001. [27d]

4.49 Juveniles under the age of 24 are held separately from adults, and pre-trial detainees are held separately from convicted prisoners. [4c]

4.50 The Government permits visits to prisons by independent human rights monitors. During 2001 the Ombudsman visited sixteen prison facilities, and the Helsinki Foundation visited two; all of these visits were unannounced. [4c] The Penitentiary Judge, who is independent of the Prison Service but has unlimited access to premises and documents, also monitors prison conditions. [16h]

Medical Services

4.51 The Polish state has, since the 1950s, provided universal access to health services. Health sector reforms since 1990 have sought to maintain universal coverage of the population and full entitlement, irrespective of risk. [42] In particular, Article 68 of the 1997 Constitution specifies that equal access to health care services, financed from public funds, shall be ensured by public authorities to citizens, irrespective of their material situation. [16i] The 1991 Health Care Institutions Act and subsequent regulations set out a range of basic services which must be provided. Only a few health services were excluded, such as alternative therapy, non-essential cosmetic surgery, and some services in health spas. Abortions are only permitted in certain circumstances (see paragraph 6.7) [42]

4.52 The Universal Health Insurance Act came into force in January 1999, under which contributions to a state health insurance scheme (established as 16 regional funds) are deducted from the salaries of all people in employment. The current premium is 7.5% of income. Non-earner groups, such as the unemployed and the retired, have their contributions covered by the state. [33c]

Educational System

4.53 The 1991 Act on the System of Education (and later amendments) specifies the structure of Polish education. Primary school education begins at age 7 and is obligatory and free of charge. Admission to school must not be conditional upon race, religion or nationality. [16d]

4.54 A reform of the education system came into effect in September 1999, in terms of which fundamental changes were made to the structure of the school system, as well as curricula. Compulsory education in Poland has been increased from eight to nine years. General education is divided into six-year primary schools (szkola podstawowa) and three-year intermediary schools, or 'gymnasiums' (gimnazjum), for which new syllabuses have been drawn up. Secondary education is received at three-year 'lyceums' (liceum), which lead to university entrance, or at two-year vocational schools (szkola zawodowa). [40a][41]

4.55 The Act on the System of Education also regulates the teaching of native language classes for children of non-Polish nationality. 18,795 persons learn their native language in 289 Polish institutions (schools and inter-school groups). The languages concerned include Belarussian, Lithuanian, Ukrainian, Slovak and German. [16d]

See also "Ethnic Minority Groups: General" and "Roma: Education".

5. HUMAN RIGHTS

5A HUMAN RIGHTS ISSUES

Overview

5.1 The European Commission, in its Report of November 2001 on Poland's Progress towards Accession, confirmed that Poland continues to fulfil the Copenhagen political criteria. The criteria, as laid down by the Copenhagen European Council in June 1993, stipulate that the country must have achieved "stability of institutions guaranteeing democracy, the rule of law, human rights, and respect for and protection of minorities". [27d]

5.2 The Commission considered that, 'in Poland, respect for and protection of minorities continues to be assured'. It also noted that Poland had now ratified the Council of Europe Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities. [27d]

5.3 Poland has also ratified the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR), the European Convention for the Prevention of Torture, the European Social Charter, the Convention Against Torture (CAT), the Convention on the Elimination of all forms of Racial Discrimination (CERD), the Convention on the Elimination of all forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW), the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC), and other international conventions. [27c] Article 91 of the Constitution provides that any ratified international agreement constitutes a part of Polish domestic law. Therefore, for all treaties relating to the protection of minorities which Poland has ratified, citizens may rely on the provisions contained in them, and the courts are obliged to apply them. Where the provisions of an international treaty conflict with Polish statutory law, precedence is to be given to the international norm over the statutory norm. [20b]

5.4 Poland has abolished the death penalty and ratified Protocol 6 of ECHR [36a]

5.5 The US State Department report for 2001 stated that the Polish government generally respects the rights of its citizens, but that problems remain in such areas as prison conditions, the inefficiency of the courts system and lengthy pre-trial detention, right to privacy, and violence against women. There was some societal discrimination and violence against ethnic minorities, and anti-Semitic sentiments persist. The Constitution prohibits arbitrary arrest and detention, and the government observes this prohibition. There were no reports of political prisoners or cases where persons were exiled in 2001. The Polish Criminal Code prohibits torture and there were no reported incidents of such treatment in 2001. [4c]

5.6 The Polish Constitution provides for the right to privacy of correspondence, but there is no legislation that provides for the general right to privacy. In response to the growing threat of organised crime and money laundering, Parliament has permitted the police and intelligence services to monitor private correspondence and to use wiretaps and electronic monitoring devices in cases involving serious crimes, narcotics, money laundering, or illegal firearms sales. Under the Criminal Code, the Minister of Justice and the Minister of Interior must authorise these investigative methods. In emergency cases, the police may initiate an investigation that utilises wiretaps or the opening of private correspondence at the same time that they seek permission from the ministers. However, there is no independent judicial review of surveillance activities, and human rights groups have expressed concern about the lack of control over the use of monitoring devices. A 1998 law prohibits - with certain specific exceptions - the collection of information about a person's ethnic origin, religious convictions, health condition, political views or membership in religious, political or trade union organisations. [4a]

5.7 The second periodic report on the implementation by Poland of the provisions of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment showed the continued changes in legislation made to create and strengthen legal guarantees to ensure respect for the civil and political rights that are the components of a State subject to the rule of law. Poland also ratified the European Convention on Human Rights and established contacts with international NGOs such as Amnesty International, the Helsinki Federation of Human Rights and Interpol. [16b]

5.8 The study of Human rights has been widely promoted in Poland. At several universities (e.g. Gdansk, Poznan, Torun, Lublin, Warsaw) human rights has become a subject of regular lectures. A number of monographs on human rights have been published. They are readily available in bookshops and libraries. The judicial decisions of the European Commission and Court in Strasbourg are widely published, both in professional publications (Prokuratura i Prawo - 'Prosecution and Law', Palestra - 'The Bar') as well as in daily papers (the legal supplement to Rzeczpospolita - 'The Republic'). The Ministry of Justice organises a number of training sessions for judges and prosecutors, which are devoted to human rights. The Supreme Court organises seminars on this subject. Particularly intensive training sessions are conducted by the community of attorneys as well as by the Association of Active Judges 'Iustitia'. [16d]

Human Rights Monitoring and NGOs

5.9 A number of human rights groups operate without government restriction, investigating and publishing their findings on human rights cases. Government officials generally are co-operative and responsive to their views. Some domestic NGOs believe that a hostile regulatory climate is developing in parts of the government bureaucracy. [4a]

5.10 The Helsinki Foundation, a major NGO, conducts human rights investigations without government interference. Members of the Foundation reported that the Polish Government displayed a generally positive and helpful attitude towards human rights investigations. [4a]

5.11 The Office of the Commissioner for Civil Rights Protection (the Ombudsman), is the Government's watchdog for human rights. It is an effective and independent body with broad authority to investigate alleged violations of civil rights and liberties. [4a] (See also paragraphs 5.15 and 5.16 below)

5.12 According to the EU Commission Report of November 1998, the country's NGOs continue to play an important and influential role in national debate. [27]

The Office of Commissioner for Civil Rights Protection (The Ombudsman)

5.13 The Commissioner for Civil Rights Protection (the Ombudsman) was first appointed in 1989 and, in accordance with the Polish Constitution, protects the rights and liberties of citizens as provided for by the Constitution and other laws. The Ombudsman is elected by the Sejm for a five year tenure and his decisions are not subject to appeal. [16d]

5.14 Any individual may file a complaint with the Ombudsman if their legal rights or liberties have been breached or violated by administrative, governmental or other bodies or institutions. [16d] A complaint may also be based on the inaction ('silence') of a public authority. [16i] The Ombudsman can sue public authorities and appear before the courts and tribunals in support of individuals whose rights have been violated. [27d]

5.15 In addition, if the Ombudsman finds that a particular provision of the law creates the opportunity for an infringement of civil rights and freedoms, he may apply to the Constitutional

Court (Tribunal) to rule on the incompatibility with the Constitution of the legal act in question. [16d]

5.16 The United Nations Human Rights Committee commented in 1999 that the Commissioner for Civil Rights had a substantial staff and was vested with broad competence. [16g] The European Commission had reported in November 1998 that the Ombudsman's office, with a staff of 190, was functioning well and had made a significant contribution to the protection of citizens rights. [27a] In 2000 the Ombudsman received almost 50,000 letters, of which 31,000 were formal submissions. [27d]

5.17 A new Ombudsman, Professor Andrzej Zoll, was elected by Parliament in June 2000. Professor Zoll, a criminal law expert, was chairman of the State Electoral Commission and president of the Constitutional Tribunal from 1993 to 1997, and Chairman of the Prime Minister's Legislative Council between 1998 and June 2000.

A new Children's Ombudsman was also appointed by Parliament in June 2000. [8q]

5.18 A Unit for the Protection of Foreigners' and National Minorities' Rights has been set up within the Ombudsman's Office specifically to deal with minority rights issues. Such issues have traditionally accounted for less than 1 percent of complaints received by the Ombudsman and it is hoped that the new unit will provide a clearer contact point for complaints. [27d]

Freedom of Speech and the Media

5.19 The Constitution provides for freedom of speech and the press and the Government respects this right. However, there are a few restrictions in law and practice. [4c]

5.20 The Criminal Code states that an individual who "publicly insults or humiliates a constitutional institution of the Republic of Poland" is subject to a fine or imprisonment of up to 2 years, while an individual who insults a public functionary is subject to a fine or imprisonment of up to 1 year. [4c]

5.21 During 2001, a number of persons, including journalists, faced charges of slander. For example, in August a city council member from Zagan received a fine for slandering the police. In May Andrzej Lepper, the leader of was sentenced to 16 months' imprisonment for slandering President Kwasniewski, Leszek Balcerowicz, and former Deputy Prime Minister Tomaszewski; Lepper was accused of calling the politicians thieves and criminals. An appeals court subsequently changed the sentence to a fine of 20,000 PLN. In May 2000, the Warsaw district court ruled that the daily newspaper, Zycie, must apologise to President Aleksander Kwasniewski for publishing untrue information suggesting that the President had contacts with Russian spies. Zycie was appealing the court's decision at end-2001. [4c]

5.22 The State Secrets Act allows for the prosecution of citizens who publish or otherwise betray state secrets. Human rights groups criticise this law, contending that it restricts the right of free speech. [4c]

5.23 The Criminal Code regulates the protection of journalistic sources. The code grants news sources protection, except in cases involving national security, murder, and terrorist acts. Pursuant to the law, statutory provisions are applied retroactively if their terms are beneficial to the accused. Journalists who refused to divulge sources prior to the new code's enactment also can avoid sanctions by invoking "journalistic privilege." [4c]

5.24 The National Radio and Television Broadcasting Council (KRRiTV) has broad powers in monitoring and regulating programming on public radio and television, allocating broadcasting frequencies and licences, and apportioning subscription revenues to public media. In order to encourage the KRRiTV's apolitical character, the nine KRRiTV members are legally obliged to suspend any membership of political parties or public associations. They are, however, chosen for their political allegiances and nominated by the Sejm, the Senate, and the President following political bargaining, thus raising potentially serious questions about the independence of broadcasting oversight from political influence. [4c]

5.25 The broadcasting law stipulates that programmes should not promote activities that are illegal or against state policy, morality, or the common good. The law, whose constitutionality has been confirmed by the Constitutional Tribunal, also requires that all broadcasts "respect the religious feelings of the audiences and in particular respect the Christian system of values." This provision has never been used as a means of censorship, although the restrictions theoretically could be used as such. [4c]

5.26 Private television broadcasters operate on frequencies selected by the Ministry of Communications and auctioned by the KRRiTV. Private radio flourishes on the local, regional, and national levels alongside public radio. [4a]

5.27 The government owns two of the three most widely viewed television channels and 17 regional stations, as well as five national radio networks. Although public television remains the major source of news and information, satellite television and private cable services (domestic and foreign) are widely available. Cable television and various satellite services carry the main public channels, Polsat, local and regional stations, and a variety of foreign stations. [4c]

5.28 Books expressing a wide range of political and social viewpoints are widely available, as are foreign periodicals and other publications from abroad. Academic freedom is respected in Poland. [4c]

5.29 Academic freedom is respected. [4c]

5.30 The Law on Public Information was signed by the President in October 2001. It sets out a clear definition of the right to public information, the entitlement to view official documents, and entitlement of access to sittings of elected government bodies. [27d]

Freedom of Religion

5.31 Article 53 of the Constitution guarantees freedom of faith and religion. The government respects this right in practice. Citizens enjoy the freedom to practice any faith they choose. Religious groups may organise, select and train personnel, solicit and receive contributions, publish and engage in consultations without government interference. There are 15 religious groups in the country whose relationship with the State is governed by specific legislation, and 140 other religious communities. The legislation outlines the internal structure of the religious groups, their activities and procedures for property restitution. There are no government restrictions on establishing and maintaining places of worship. Religious communities may register with the Government, but they are not required to do so and may function freely without registration. Two new religious communities were registered in 2001. All churches and recognised religious groups share the same privileges, such as reduced taxes. [4c]

5.32 The Guarantee of Freedom of Conscience and Religion Act dated 17 May 1989 provides for the setting up of churches and other religious associations by every person wishing to do so. The procedure requires a declaration of adherence to be delivered and an entry into the register to be made. As at 1 July 1994, religious activity was carried out in Poland by about 100 Churches and other religious associations. Some of them (15 Churches) have their own legal status regulated by the Act. The others have so far used the procedure of entry into the register. This double form of regulation is used merely to ease the settlement of the legal condition of the new religious associations. It does not, however, cause any differences in the rights of these associations to perform their religious functions. [16e]

5.33 The Roman Catholic Church was granted full legal status in May 1989, when the Sejm approved three laws regulating aspects of relations between the Church and the State. The legislation guaranteed freedom of worship, and permitted the Church to administer its own affairs. The Church was also granted access to the media, and allowed to operate its own schools, hospitals and charitable organisations. [1a]

5.34 The Republic of Poland guarantees its citizens the right to take part in religious practices and rites also through the mass media, and in particular through the All Poland radio which, in the field of radio programmes for churches and minority denominations, plays an essential role. The basis for this policy is the agreements concluded with the Polish Ecumenical Council, the Seventh Day Adventists Church and the Union of Jewish Religious Communities in the Republic of Poland, and also by the practice, which has developed over many years, of co-operation between "Polish Radio" SA and religious communities other than the ones mentioned above. [16d]

5.35 The Constitution gives parents the right to bring up their children according to their own religious and philosophical beliefs. Religious education classes continue to be taught in the public schools at public expense. Although the Catholic Church representatives teach the vast majority of religious classes in the schools, parents can request religious classes in any of the religions legally registered in Poland, including Protestant, Orthodox, and Jewish religious instruction. Such non-Catholic religious instruction exists in practice, although it is not common and the instructors are paid by the Ministry of Education. [4c]

5.36 Article 257 of the Criminal Code provides that anyone who insults a person or group of people in public because of, inter-alia, their religious status, or absence of a religious denomination, could be liable to imprisonment for up to three years. Under Articles 118 and 119, the use of violence, or an unlawful threat of violence, against a person or group because of their religious status carries a prison sentence of up to five years. Article 256 specifies penalties for incitement of racial, ethnic or religious hatred. [16i][57b]

Main Religions

5.37 In 1995 an estimated 35 million people, some 95% of the population of Poland were estimated to be adherents of the Catholic Church. In 1994 150,000 of the population in Poland, were estimated to be Protestants, including:

Baptist Union of Poland

Evangelical Augsburg Church in Poland
Evangelical-Reformed Church
Pentecostal Church
Seventh-day Adventist Church in Poland
United Methodist Church,

as well as several other small Protestant churches including the Church of Christ, the Church of Evangelical Christians, the Evangelical Christian Church and the Jehovah's Witnesses. [1a]

5.38 In 1994, there were also estimated to be some 5,000 Muslims of Tartar origin in Bialystok Province (eastern Poland), and smaller communities in Warsaw, Gdansk and elsewhere. [1a]

5.39 There is also a Union of Jewish Communities in Poland, which comprises 14 synagogues and has a registered following of approximately 2,500 members. [1a]

Religious Minorities: Jews

5.40 The Jewish community in Poland is estimated to number 10,000 to 15,000, compared with about 3.3 million prior to World War II. Although surveys in recent years have shown a continuing decline in anti-Semitic sentiment, and avowedly anti-Semitic candidates have fared very badly in elections since 1989, anti-Semitic feeling persists among certain sectors of the Polish population, occasionally manifesting itself in acts of vandalism and physical or verbal abuse. [4c][3]

5.41 Sporadic incidents of harassment directed against the Jewish community continued to occur in 2001, often generated by skinheads and other marginal societal groups. For example, on November 11, during Polish Independence Day, approximately 400 Polish ultra nationalists who chanted anti-Semitic and anti-EU slogans marched through the heavily industrialised city of Katowice. The march culminated in a rally at which demonstrators burned the Israeli and EU flags. Local authorities initiated an official investigation to determine whether identifiable demonstrators should be charged with violating laws that prohibit displays of Fascist symbols and public insults to persons on the basis of national, ethnic or racial identity. The investigation was still in progress at year's end. [4c]

5.42 Occasional cases of cemetery desecration, including of both Jewish and Catholic shrines, also occurred in 2001. In February 16 tombstones were knocked down in the Jewish cemetery in Wroclaw. In May unknown perpetrators overturned 39 tombstones in a Jewish cemetery in Auschwitz. No arrests or prosecutions took place after of these events. Similar incidents had occurred sporadically in 1999 and 2000. For example, in January and again in May 1999, the Jewish cemetery in Krakow was vandalised and gravestones destroyed. In July, vandals sprayed swastikas and graffiti on the Jewish community centre in Bielsko-Biala. In April 2000, anti-Semitic and anti-Roma graffiti was painted on the wall of the Jewish cemetery at Oswiecim (Auschwitz). Government authorities have consistently criticised such actions and made efforts to prevent similar acts from occurring in the future, for example, by increasing police patrols around Jewish sites. [4c][4a]

5.43 In April 2001 a controversial Gdansk priest, Henryk Jankowski, created in his church a replica of the barn in Jedwabne in which members of that town's Jewish community were burned to death in 1941. A sign near the display accused Jews of killing Christ and persecuting Poles. The local archbishop ordered the tableau removed. Religious and political leaders strongly criticised Jankowski for his action. [4c]

5.44 In May 2000, the presidents of Israel and Poland joined thousands of marchers from Poland and abroad in the 12th March of the Living from Auschwitz to Birkenau to honour victims of the Holocaust. In September 2000, the refurbished Chevra Lomdei Mishnayot synagogue and the Jewish Centre were opened at Auschwitz. [4a]

5.45 In the small north-eastern village of Jedwabne, on 10 July 2001, President Kwasniewski publicly atoned for the brutal murder in 1941 of their Jewish neighbours by Polish nationals, then under Nazi occupation. He was supported by SLD leader - now Prime Minister - Leszek Miller. [47a]

Religious Minorities: Religious Sects

5.46 The number of such sects in Poland has been estimated to be around 300 and it is believed that nearly one million Poles are under the influence of various sects and quasi-religious organisations. Polish law does not provide for measures to control the activities of religious sects. In September 1997, the then Prime Minister, Włodzimierz Cimoszewicz, appointed the Inter-Ministry Team for New Religious Movements, which is to conduct research into the potential threats posed by particular organisations to state security or to law and order. [10c]

5.47 It is reported that there is some public concern about the growth of groups perceived to be 'sects', and the influence of non-mainstream religious groups, especially in the wake of press reports of the deaths of a few young persons in circumstances suggesting cult activity. [4a] In June 2000 it was reported that a section for 'new religious movements' is to be created within the Interior Ministry to look into the problem of cults. It will have a monitoring role. [4a][10b]

Freedom of Assembly and Association

5.48 The law provides for freedom of assembly and the Government respects this right in practice. Permits are not necessary for public meetings but are required for public demonstrations; demonstration organisers must obtain these permits from local authorities if the demonstration might block a public road. For large demonstrations, organisers are also required to inform the local police of the time and place of their activities and their planned route. Permits for public meetings are issued on a routine basis. [4c]

5.49 The law also provides for freedom of association, and the Government generally respects this right in practice. Private associations need government approval to organise and must register with their district court. The procedure essentially requires the organisation to sign a declaration to abide by the law. In practice, however, the procedure itself is complicated and may be subject to the discretion of the judge in charge. [4c]

Employment Rights

5.50 The Constitution (Article 65) provides that everyone shall have the freedom to choose and pursue their occupation and place of work, except as specified by statute. Article 66 guarantees the right to safe and hygienic conditions of work, and to annual paid holidays. These provisions are specified in a more precise manner in the Labour Code. [50][16i]

5.51 Both the Constitution and the Labour Code prohibit discrimination in the workplace on account of, inter alia, gender, race or ethnicity. [16i][50][53]

5.52 The law provides that all workers, including civilian employees of the police and armed forces, have the right to establish and join trade unions of their choosing, and workers exercise these rights. In 2000 there were approximately 360 officially registered unions at national level. Unions have the right to strike, except in 'essential services' such as uniformed services and local government. [4c]

5.53 The Ministry of Labour, trade unions and employers organisations negotiate a revised national minimum wage every three months. However, enforcement of the national minimum wage is difficult, partly because of the large size of the informal economy. Many workers in agriculture, particularly foreign seasonal workers, and many construction workers earn less than the minimum wage. [4c]

5.48 The Labour Code defines strict and extensive standards for the protection of workers health and safety. [4c]

People Trafficking

5.54 The law prohibits trafficking in persons; however, Poland is a country of origin, transit, and destination for trafficked persons, primarily women and girls and to a lesser extent boys. Since statistics on prostitution do not distinguish victims of trafficking from those wilfully engaged in prostitution, escort services, pornography and other aspects of the sex trade, the scope of the trafficking problem is difficult to define. The international NGO La Strada estimates that approximately 60 percent of foreign women who worked as prostitutes in the country are victims of trafficking. [4c] The Centre for Reproductive Law and Policy notes that there has been a growth in trafficking of teenaged women, mainly between the ages of 15 and 18. [63]

5.55 Polish women and minors are trafficked to western European countries such as Germany, the Netherlands, Belgium, and Switzerland for sexual exploitation. Women and girls are trafficked into Poland from countries such as Ukraine, Bulgaria, Romania, Belarus, and Russia. Ukraine is the largest single source of foreign women trafficked in Poland. [4c]

5.56 Victims are trafficked through such means as fake employment offers, arranged marriages, fraud, and coercive measures. Many believe that they are accepting employment as waitresses, maids, or nannies abroad. In the last few years, trafficking has become increasingly organised and has been associated with a rampant growth in document fraud. As many as 90 percent of the women and girls trafficked in the country have false travel documents, and the trafficking of a single woman usually involves a network of criminals. [4c]

5.57 Several provisions in the Criminal Code specifically address the problem of trafficking. The law prohibits trafficking in human beings and pimping and imposes sentences of up to 10 years on those convicted. It also bans recruiting or luring persons into prostitution; penalties for this offence are also up to 10 years. The most severe sentences are reserved for individuals trafficking in children and those luring women into prostitution abroad. In 2000 the Government prosecuted 198 cases under Article 204, which prohibits luring persons into prostitution, and 13 cases under Article 253, which pertains to trafficking in persons and organising adoptions for material benefit. [4c]

Freedom of Movement

5.58 Although the Constitution does not address freedom of movement, the Government does not restrict internal or foreign travel. Citizens who leave Poland have no trouble returning and there are no restrictions on emigration. [4c]

5.59 All citizens of Poland are issued with identity cards (sometimes referred to as residence permits) when they are 18 years old. These cards are issued by local government offices (Population and Identity Card Departments). These cards are not only proof of identity but also include information about where the person resides. The residence entry makes up only one part of the ID Card. The instructions on the inside of the back cover of the ID Card booklet state that everyone in Poland should be able to identify themselves to the authorities if required. The ID cards are updated to show changes of personal circumstances, for example marriage, divorce, death of a partner, photo update and change of address. Whenever a person changes their address they should re-register their residential address with the Population and Identity Card Department District Office, which will amend and stamp the identity card. For people who have either been evicted from their homes, for example, for not paying rent or bills, or who choose a nomadic/homeless style of life, or who have moved to another country and the move has been formally reported to the Polish authorities by a family member at the same address, they will have an entry on page 6 of their ID Card which in English literally means "registered at nowhere". Everyone born in Poland is eligible for an ID Card. Checks have failed to locate anyone who has been refused an ID Card and/or to have a residential entry put in the card. There is no connection between political affiliation and obtaining an ID Card. [2j]

5.60 In normal circumstances, members of the public are not required to register with the police, with the exception of anyone who is subject to criminal proceedings. [2j]

5.61 The law provides for the granting of refugee status in accordance with the 1951 UN Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees and its 1967 Protocol. Persons recognised as refugees under the Convention are granted permission to remain in the country permanently. The Government co-operates with the UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and other humanitarian organisations in assisting refugees. In 2000 the Government received 4,588 applications for asylum, compared with 2,864 in 1999. Of the 4,588 applications received, 78 were granted. Those refused have a right of appeal to an independent board. There were no reports in 2001 of the forced return of persons to a country where they feared persecution. [4c]

5B. HUMAN RIGHTS - SPECIFIC GROUPS

Women

6.1 The Constitution grants men and women full and equal rights and freedom from discrimination on the basis of gender. Article 33, in particular, specifies the right to equal compensation for work of similar value. [50] The provisions of the Constitution are translated into employment relations through the Labour Code, which guarantees men and women equal rights when engaged in comparable work. The Labour Code, however, lacks provisions and mechanisms to enforce legal claims, and it does not specifically cover discrimination in staff recruitment. [63]

6.2 In practice, however, women frequently are paid less for equivalent work, mainly hold lower positions, and are less likely to be promoted than men. [4c] According to the Central Statistical Office (data collected in August 1998), the national average salary for women constituted 82% of men's salary for similar work. [35]

6.2 Nevertheless women are employed in a wide variety of professions and occupations, and a number of women occupy high positions in government and in the private sector. In December 2000, the Constitutional Tribunal ruled that the law setting retirement age at 60 for women and 65 for men is discriminatory, as it reduces women's chances for promotion and better pensions. Based on this verdict women can appeal to the labour court if employers insist that they retire at 60. [4c] Women have a right to paid maternity leave and pregnant women enjoy special protection under the Labour Code. [63] . Both men and women have the right to claim child sick care. [4c]

6.3 Violence against women continues to be a problem. According to a police spokesman, there were 23,987 cases of family abuse reported during 2000, with 213 of those being of particularly severe abuse. Police do intervene in cases of domestic violence, and husbands can be convicted for beating their wives. According to a Women's Rights Centre report there has been significant progress in awareness of the issue of violence against women. It has become more visible in the media and an increasing number of NGOs are addressing the problem. In July 2000, an Office of Victims' Rights Spokesman at the Ministry of Internal Affairs and Administration was established. The main task of the office is to ensure that victims of violence are treated with respect by law enforcement and the judicial system. The office provides legal and psychological assistance for victims and their families. [4a][4c]

6.4 During 2000, there were 2,399 cases of rape reported to the police, compared with 2,029 in 1999. However, NGO's report that women often are unwilling to report this crime and estimate that the actual incidence of rape is 10 times higher than these statistics suggest. Police began proceedings in 1,803 of the 2,029 cases reported in 1999; perpetrators were found guilty and convicted in 83% of cases. [35]

6.5 The Ombudsman for Human Rights monitors the rights of women within the broader context of human rights. Observers consider that the broad scope of the office's mandate dilutes its ability to function as an effective advocate of women's issues. Within the Cabinet in 1997 the government Plenipotentiary for Family Affairs replaced the government Plenipotentiary for Women and the Family. Several women's rights NGOs exist, including the Polish Foundation for Women and Family Planning and the Women's Rights Centre. These groups are active advocates of gender equality and advance their goals through research, monitoring, and publication. Several church-sponsored women's advocacy organisations also exist, but their co-operation with other women's NGOs is limited. [4a]

6.6 Public discussion of the problem of sexual harassment is relatively new but women are increasingly talking about it and speaking out against it. While laws specifically addressing sexual harassment do not exist, social awareness is increasing, as are mechanisms with the potential to deal with the problem. The new Criminal Code, for example, states that whoever takes advantage of a position of power in a relationship to gain sexual gratification may be sentenced to imprisonment for up to 3 years. According to a Supreme Court advisory opinion, such a relationship can occur between employers and employees, between supervisors and subordinates, or between teachers and students. This provision can only be used when the harassment occurs between persons of unequal rank. [4a]

6.7 Legislation introduced in 1993 provides for abortion only in the following three circumstances: the life or health of the mother is endangered; pre-natal examinations reveal the sickness or damage of the child; the pregnancy is the result of a crime, i.e. rape. A clandestine abortion system is said to be well developed in Poland, with attendant risks to the life and health of women. In recent years, many women have travelled to other countries for abortions. [35]

See also Section VB "People Trafficking".

Children

6.8 The principle of equality of all children, regardless of their race, colour, sex, language, religion, national and social origin, property or birth, lies at the base of the legal regulations concerning every child, and is strictly observed whenever law is applied. The ratification by Poland of the Convention on the Rights of the Child has had a substantial impact on the creation and observance of law aimed at the protection of the rights of every child. [16e]

6.9 An network of childcare establishments has been set up in the educational system. In this system institutions provide childcare to children from their birth to their coming of age (for example crèches, kindergartens, infant orphans' homes, orphans' homes run by families, guardianship emergency centres, special care educational homes, school dormitories, youth community centres etc). [16e] Education is universal and mandatory until age 18, and public schools are free. [4c]

6.10 The Criminal Code provides that anyone who physically or psychologically abuses a minor may receive a prison sentence of 3 months to 5 years, or more in certain circumstances. [4c] Sexual molestation of a minor under 15 years of age carries up to 10 years imprisonment, as does using children in pornography. [63]

6.11 The law prohibits child prostitution: The Penal Code states that anyone who, with the purpose of obtaining a material benefit, incites a minor into prostitution or facilitates such prostitution is liable to a sentence of up to 10 years imprisonment. Nevertheless, this appears to be a growing problem, though it is difficult to estimate its extent. In 2000, of the 198 cases initiated by prosecutors under Article 204, which prohibits luring persons into prostitution, 22 involved victims who were minors. [4c]

6.12 A significant development has been the adoption in January 2000 of a law establishing an independent Ombudsman for the Rights of Children; The first children's Ombudsman was elected to this post by Parliament in June 2000. This role mainly involves children's rights in the fields of health protection, the family, social conditions and education, and it is expected that this office will address the shortcomings regarding child protection which were listed in the Polish Ombudsman's 1999 report. [27c][8q]

6.13 Poland ratified the Convention on Child Hard Labour in August 2001. [30i]

Homosexuals

6.14 In April 1995 the Constitutional Committee of the Polish Parliament proposed that the anti-discrimination clause of the constitution include protection from discrimination on the grounds of sexual orientation. This proposal met with strong opposition, particularly from the Roman Catholic Church. The Constitution which was finally approved dropped the list of protected categories of people and the anti-discrimination clause [11] (Article 32) states "All persons shall be equal before the law. All persons shall have the right to equal treatment by public authorities. No one shall be discriminated against in political, social or economic life for any reason whatsoever." [3]

6.15 Homosexuality was decriminalised in 1932, and there is an equal age of consent of 15 years regardless of sexual orientation. [11]

6.16 The Constitution restricts marriage to heterosexual couples. Article 18 states " The Marriage is a relationship between woman and man; the family, motherhood and parenthood are under the protection and care of the Republic of Poland." Only heterosexual married couples and single people are permitted to adopt children in Poland. [11]

6.17 Few lesbians are open about their sexual orientation in the workplace for fear of being dismissed or harassed. This is particularly the case with lesbians working as teachers or in other professions that bring them into contact with children. There is a widespread belief in Poland that lesbians and gay men should not be involved in raising children and young people. [11]

6.18 The Association of LAMBDA groups in Poland reported that in the army, homosexual soldiers are directed to receive psychiatric treatment. If their homosexuality is proven, they are usually released to civilian life after being diagnosed as having "personality disorders". [11]

6.19 A gay and lesbian magazine Filo has been published since 1986. Lambda, an association of groups, obtained legal registration in February 1990. [11]

Ethnic Minority Groups: General

6.20 Article 35 of the Polish Constitution ensures Polish citizens belonging to national and ethnic minorities the freedom to maintain and develop their own language, to maintain customs and traditions and to develop their own culture. National and ethnic minorities have the right to establish educational and cultural institutions, institutions designed to protect religious identity, as well as to participate in the resolution of matters connected with their cultural identity. Article 32 stipulates that all persons are equal before the law, all have the right to equal treatment by public authorities and no one may be discriminated against in political, social or economic life for any reason whatsoever. Article 13 forbids political parties or other organisations whose programmes or activities sanction racial or national hatred. [20b][50]

6.21 Poland has ratified the Framework Convention for National Minorities, and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms Of Racial Discrimination (CERD). [27d] Article 91 of the Constitution provides that any ratified international agreement constitutes a part of Polish domestic law. Therefore, for all treaties relating to the protection of minorities which Poland has ratified, citizens may rely on the provisions contained in them, and the courts are obliged to apply them. Where the provisions of an international treaty conflict with Polish statutory law, precedence is to be given to the international norm over the statutory norm. [20b]

6.22 In February 2002 it was reported that the Sejm was reviewing the draft Law on National and Ethnic Minorities, and that this bill had passed through the first reading procedure in the Sejm. The Sejm Commission on National and Ethnic Minorities had spent several years working on this draft law, which is intended to assure the rights of minorities to maintain their own culture, language and identity and protect them against assimilation. The law covers such areas as education and culture, and provides for the right to use one's own language in official matters. The bilingual status of certain counties, for example, may extend to public institutions and road signs. Minority language instruction in schools is voluntary and must be state-financed. A newly created Office for National Minority Affairs is to oversee the distribution of state subsidies. The Roma minority is included within the terms of this law.

[30g][30h]

6.23 Reports of the European Commission, from 1997 to 2001, have stated that, in Poland, respect for and protection of minorities continues to be assured. The November 2000 Report also commented that, since 1993, there has been a reduction in negative attitudes towards minorities in Poland. [27a][27b][27c][27d] The 2001 Report noted that Poland has an established track record of providing appropriate international and constitutional legal safeguards for human rights and protection of minorities. [27d]

6.24 Poland has one of the lowest percentages of minorities in Europe. According to the information from the Parliamentary Commission (in 1996), the overall population of national and ethnic minorities in Poland is between 1 million and 1.3 million people, i.e. only around 2.5 per cent of the total population of the country. The following table shows the estimated number of people in each community, according to various sources:

	Sources of data
	Parliamentary Commission	Other Estimates
Belarussian	250,000 - 350,000	200,000 - 400,000
Ukrainian/Lemko	250,000 - 300,000	250,000 - 300,000
Lithuanian	20,000 - 25,000	25,000 - 30,000
Slovak & Czech	15,000 - 25,000	25,000 - 30,000
German	350,000	300,000 - 450,000
Jewish	8,000 -10,000	10,000 - 15,000
Roma	25,000	25,000 - 50,000
Russian		10,000 - 15,000
Armenian		8,000 -10,000

[16e][53][20b]

The next general census, to be conducted between 21 May and 8 June 2002, will contain a question on national /ethnic identity. The Polish Interior Minister has appealed to members of minority groups to co-operate in providing this information. [8a]

6.25 There are also minorities of an 'immigrant' nature - including Greeks and Macedonians (5000), Vietnamese (20-25,000), Palestinians, Kurds - numbering from several hundred to 2,000 people in total. Significant religious and ethnic minorities also include Karaims - about 200 persons - and Tartars, 3 - 4000 members. [16d]

6.26 The Act on Polish Citizenship of 15 February 1962 (Dz. U. No. 10, item 49 with later amendments) does not include any restrictions on account of race, nationality or religion in respect of the right to obtain Polish citizenship. [16d]

6.27 The Section for National Minorities was established in 2000 within the Department for Citizenship in the Ministry of the Interior. This Section deals with general national and ethnic minority issues, in particular related to rights and obligations as citizens. It also co-ordinates the work of the Interdepartmental Group for National Minorities (Inter-governmental Commission on National Minority Issues) which is composed of representatives of different ministries. The main task of this Group is to co-ordinate the activities of government administrative bodies in implementing national policy towards national minorities as well as the preparation of government programmes for minorities when necessary. [38]

6.28 Social and education matters of national minorities are within the competence of the Ministry of Labour and Social Policy as well as the Ministry of National Education. [38] Issues related to the preservation of culture and tradition of national minorities are the responsibility of the Department for Culture of National Minorities (in the Ministry of Culture and National Heritage), which is authorised to subsidise publications, festivals and other cultural events. [38] Steps began in 1989, and there has been progress since, to ensure ethnic (national) minorities their rights to preserve and develop their own social and cultural rights, and to promote the use their own language. [16d] The Department for Culture of National Minorities funds the publication of many periodicals and co-operates with 11 representative organisations of the following national and ethnic minorities in Poland: Ukrainian, German, Belarussian, Lithuanian, Tartar, Armenian, Karaim, Czech and Slovak. Two investments have been financed from the State budget: the construction of the Lithuanian Culture House in Punska and the construction of the Museum in Hajnowka (Belorussian minority). The General Conservator of Monuments provides supportive funds for the renovation of sacral monuments, as well as for Orthodox Church cloisters and cemeteries. [16d]

6.29 All minority groups have established associations or social organisations, the aims of which are mainly to preserve and increase knowledge of history and traditions, develop cultural activity, and in many instances also to promote the study of languages. In 1993 there were 109 associations and 13 minority group foundations registered, and in 1994 about 120 organisations of this type carried out activities. [16e]

6.30 The Polish delegation to the UN Human Rights Committee has stated that Poland has undertaken to reject all forms of racial discrimination, and this principle has been elevated to the rank of constitutional norm. There exist no legal acts, which would allow the State authorities and State administrative organs to differentiate between citizens according to racial criteria, and no such acts may be enacted. On the contrary, all forms of racial discrimination are considered to be offences punishable by imprisonment (articles. 272, 273, 274, 276, 278, 280 of the Criminal Code). [16d]

6.31 The Act on the Elections to the Sejm of 28 May 1993 contains a provision, which states that the percentage threshold (5%) of votes cast in the whole country does not apply to the electoral committees of the registered organisations of national minorities. This is to safeguard the political rights of national minorities. [16d][4a]

6.32 In the regions where different minorities reside, local radio stations regularly broadcast programmes in the languages of these minorities. The Act on Broadcasting calls on public television and radio channels to 'take into consideration the needs of national minorities and ethnic groups', though it does not specify minimum airtime ratios. [53] In recent years there has been a considerable increase in the number of periodicals published by different minorities. They are mainly supported by financial grants from the Department for Culture of National Minorities. In 1998 the Department was subsidising 33 minority magazines and newspapers, of which 20 were published in minority languages. [16e][4a][53]

6.33 With regard to education, the law provides for national and ethnic minorities to have access to the learning of their native tongue and to instruction in their own language. According to a report published in 2001, 37,000 pupils in Poland were receiving minority language tuition in 532 schools, or inter-school groups. However, instruction in Romani is only provided in some regions, and at the level of primary education. According to the Government, instruction in Romani is difficult to achieve because of the diversity of the Roma community in Poland (several groups which differ in terms of language and culture), as well as a non-availability of suitably qualified teaching staff. [20b][16i]

6.34 In a report on Poland published in June 2000, the European Commission Against Racism and Intolerance (ECRI) noted a lack of public awareness of the problems faced by minority groups, and a marked lack of interest in other cultures and societies. The current moves towards setting up a legislative and policy framework acknowledging the existence and needs of Poland's national minorities are an encouraging sign in a society where before 1989 any acknowledgement of the existence of national minority groups was suppressed. [3]

6.35 In Poland, ultra-national parties expressing hostility towards minorities and propagating anti-Semitic slogans are at the margin of political life. They have little public support. In parliamentary elections in 1991, 1993 and 1997, such parties ("Polish National Community -Polish National Party" and "Homeland - Polish List") altogether gained less than 30,000 votes (approx. 0.2% of votes cast), and secured no seats in Parliament. [20b]

6.36 Violent attacks on visible minorities are not common, but incidents of verbal abuse occur. It has also been reported that a significant number of visitors to Poland of African, Asian and Arab origin have experienced some type of aggression during their stay, often in the form of verbal abuse. [3]

6.37 Articles 118 and 119 of the Criminal Code specify punishment for the use of violence or unlawful threats against a person or group of people because of their ethnic, national, racial or religious status. Article 257 punishes the insulting of a person or group of people in public on the basis of their national, ethnic, racial or religious affiliation. Article 256 specifies penalties for incitement of racial, ethnic or religious hatred. [16i][57b] These provisions are enforced in practice. [16i]

6.38A Unit for the Protection of Foreigners' and National Minorities' Rights has been set up within the Ombudsman's Office specifically to deal with minority rights issues. Such issues have traditionally accounted for less than 1 percent of complaints received by the Ombudsman and it is hoped that the new unit will provide a clearer contact point for complaints. [27d]

6.39 In addressing the ethnic minorities of the Bialystok region in June 1998, the Prime Minister, Jerzy Buzek, said that respect for the rights of ethnic minorities was one of the crucial components of a democratic system. He observed that ordinary disputes among people in that region were frequently classified as religious or ethnic disputes. He declared that ethnic minorities could count on a very serious treatment of their problems under Polish law which also guarantees them cultural and educational development. [30d]

Roma

Background

6.40 The present size of the Roma population in Poland is unknown; most estimates range between 25,000 and 50,000, with several sources quoting around 30,000. [20b][4a]

6.41 Roma in Poland are divided into four main groups, which are differentiated by history, tradition and dialects:

- Polska or Polish Roma (Lowland Roma): Largest of the four groups, the Polska Roma are natives of Poland, having first arrived possibly as early as the fifteenth century. Their language borrows much from German. In the make-up of the Polska Roma are also three sub-groups: Chaladytka Roma (from the territory of Russia), Sasytka Roma (from the former Prussia) and Galicjaki (from the former Austrian partition). The Polska Roma have a traditional leader known as "Szero Rom".
- Kalderash (Kelderara or Kelderasz): Are Vlach or Wallachian Roma who speak Romani dialects influenced by Romanian. Kalderash Roma started to arrive in Poland from Romania and Hungary in the 19th century. The group is composed of clans or 'vitsa'. Traditionally tinsmiths.
- Lovari (Lowarzy): Are also Vlach Roma. Many of the Lovari clans arrived from the Soviet Union after 1945. The most important clans are the Michaj, Lakatosz and Kopasz who live mainly around Lublin, Wroclaw, Poznan, Szczecin and Krakow.
- Bergitka or Carpathian Roma (Highland Roma): Live mainly in the Carpathians and Tatry regions, particularly around Nowy Targ and Nowy Sacz. Bergitka Roma are traditionally 'settled', whereas the Polska, Kalderash and Lovari groups were traditionally nomadic. They are recognised as the poorest group of Roma in Poland. [See Paragraph 6.71]
[5][6][52][20a][58]

It is reportedly not uncommon for members of different Roma groups living in a particular area not to communicate with each other, or to be antagonistic towards one another. [52][38]

6.42 Roma first arrived in the Polish territories in the fifteenth century. It is believed that their roots are in northern India, which they left a thousand or more years ago. [15][52] Before World War II there were about 50,000 Roma in Poland; as many as 35,000 Polish Roma perished in the Holocaust. [14]

6.43 After the War some 75% of Polish Roma were still nomadic. Communism's forced settlement policies during the period 1950 - 1980 (especially of March 1964) forced the Roma population to become sedentary; Roma could, at that time, be prosecuted or imprisoned for such minor offences as lighting bonfires, not registering a change of address, itinerancy, or failure of their children attending school. [6][14]

6.44 The dissolution of communism brought some basic changes in the legal position of national and ethnic minorities in Poland. The existence of minorities was publicly and politically acknowledged and institutions for their protection were established. [20b]

Roma: National policy in Poland

6.45 The Roma community in Poland is treated as a national and ethnic minority, and as such it is entitled to receive full protection and assistance from the state in accordance with national legislation and international agreements ratified by Poland. (Ratified international agreements have the force of law in Poland.) [20b]

6.46 The general conception of a national policy with respect to the problems of the Roma community began to crystallise in 1996. This was due to two factors, on the one hand, in the middle of 1989 a general change in the approach of authorities towards national minorities took place. At the same time, the Roma community started to organise itself and put forward representatives for contact with official institutions. In 1996, for the first time, changes in the Roma situation were being supported at a national level. [5]

6.47 The Helsinki Foundation for Human Rights, in a report of September 1997, commented that after 1989 the treatment of Roma by the authorities in Poland had changed markedly. The authorities now recognised the Roma community as a national minority, which should be helped and protected by law. The Polish legal system (with regard to the Constitution, legislature and executive orders) and Polish international obligations institute basic guarantees for the protection rights of Roma and of other people who belong to ethnic national minorities, though there was an absence of a homogeneous legal regulation with regard to minorities. The report added that the policy of the state towards Roma, as it is actually carried out, is not of a discriminatory character. [20a]

6.48 The European Commission stated in its November 2000 report that there is no overt policy of discrimination on the part of the Polish government towards the Roma minority, but that the economic and social circumstances of the Roma are poor and worse than those of the population in general, and that some acts of discrimination by public authorities do take place. [27c]

6.49 Article 32 of the Constitution stipulates that all persons are equal before the law, all have the right to equal treatment by public authorities and no one may be discriminated against in political, social or economic life for any reason whatsoever. [16i]

6.50 A Unit for the Protection of Foreigners' and National Minorities' Rights has been set up within the Ombudsman's Office specifically to deal with minority rights issues. Such issues have traditionally accounted for less than 1 percent of complaints received by the Ombudsman and it is hoped that the new unit will provide a clearer contact point for complaints. [27d]

6.51 The Department of National Minorities within the Ministry of Culture funds two bilingual

Romani/Polish periodicals: Dialog Pheniben and Rrom-po-Drom. This funding amounted to 108,000 PLN in 1998. [53]

The Pilot Programme in the Malopolska Province for the years 2001 - 2003

6.52 During the year 2000, several working meetings of the Interdepartmental Group for National Minorities were devoted to the issues of Bergitka Roma, who have been recognised as the poorest Roma group in Poland. As a result, the 'Pilot Government Programme for the Roma Community in the Malopolska Province' for the years 2001 - 2003 was prepared and launched in March 2001 to focus on this region in south-eastern Poland where Roma face particularly severe hardship. The main aim of the programme is 'to achieve full participation of Roma who live (in this region) and to mitigate the disparities between this group and the rest of society'. [38]

6.53 The basic areas of activity in the Programme are as follows:

- Education
- Combating unemployment
- Health care
- Living conditions, including housing
- Security
- Culture
- Information ('Knowledge in and about the Roma Community') [57]

Some information on specific projects appears under the headings Education, Unemployment and Housing, below.

6.54 Also involved in the programme are plenipotentiaries for Roma issues, who were appointed in 2000 in two Malopolska counties in which there are significant Roma populations. [38]

6.55 Prior to the current Programme was a Malopolska project initiated and conducted in 1999 - 2000 by the European Institute for Democracy, with the co-operation of the British Embassy, and financed by the British Know How Fund. [53]

Roma: Popular prejudice

6.56 The European Commission against Racism and Intolerance (ECRI) has stated that: "Prejudices against the Roma community persist in Poland, and certainly lead to discriminations in everyday life" and "It is reported that the Roma community is generally excluded from the Polish communities alongside which it lives..." [3]

6.57 The Polish Helsinki Committee observed in 1999 that Roma are often stereotyped very negatively and, in public opinion polls, are "placed at the end of the list of most liked national group". This report added, however, that "prejudices towards Roma in everyday life do not take drastic forms and restriction of Roma to their own society helps to ease these prejudices". [20b]

6.58 Polish authorities have also stated that relations between Roma and non-Roma communities are largely based on stereotypes. Dishonesty, reluctance to work, a lack of hygiene and high levels of criminality are some of the elements in the image of Roma which still prevails in Polish public opinion. This report continued: "On the other hand, living in social isolation which has been both imposed on and chosen by them, Roma are distrustful and contemptuous of 'outsiders', though often not showing their feelings." [57]

6.59 According to the Chairman's Office of the Police Headquarters in Poland, in localities which are inhabited by Roma communities, 'conflicts with the local communities happen and the reasons for these vary greatly'. In a 1997 letter, the Office cited a number of cases to support their view that many such conflicts and offences are motivated by factors other than intolerance or racial discrimination. [19]

6.60 At a meeting of Roma representatives in Warsaw in December 2001 to sum up the results of the "Romanies in local communities" programme, an appeal was made to the Polish media to present Romanies in a better light. (The "Romanies in local communities" programme has been implemented by the European Institute for Democracy and funded by the British Know-How Fund.) The Ombudsman, who attended this meeting, also expressed the importance of making other Poles aware of how Romanies live. [8y]

Roma: Violence against Roma

6.61 There have been occasional incidents of racially motivated violence directed at Roma, usually involving 'skinheads'. Members of the Roma community are also sometimes the victims of verbal harassment and malicious damage to property. Racist graffiti often appears in the vicinity of Roma communities. [4c][53]

6.62 Although some incidents of violence may not have been reported to the police, and though the police may sometimes deny that racial motivation played a role in certain other cases [53], it is apparent that the actual incidence of racially-motivated violence in Poland is relatively low. The European Commission against Racism and Intolerance (ECRI) stated in their Report published in June 2000: "...violent manifestations of racism appear to be relatively rare in Poland"...and "violent attacks on visible minorities are not common; however, incidents of verbal harassment occur". [3] The US State Department Report for 2001: "There have been occasional incidents of skinheads clashing with Roma and racially motivated violence directed at Roma". According to a report of the Open Society Institute, based in turn on information from other sources, fifteen incidents of racially motivated violence against Roma were reported by NGO's and Roma Associations during the years 1999 and 2000. This document adds, however, that the actual figure could be considerably higher due to incidents not reported. [53]

6.63 Sources consulted give details of the following incident which occurred in 2001:

On 19 August 2001 a group of youths, shouting threats and racist insults, damaged cars and other vehicles belonging to Roma guests staying in a holiday resort near Plock. The youths did not gain access to the hotel itself, but guests and hotel staff found themselves barricaded in while windows were broken and further damage caused. A police intervention squad from Plock was called in and arrested three suspects, aged 18, 19 and 23. One of the guests had been hit by a brick and was rushed to hospital; three others suffered minor injuries. The cases of those arrested were pending at year's end. According to the PNB News Agency, the police have promised increased preventative activity in the area. [4c][10g]

6.64 Articles 118 and 119 of the Criminal Code specify punishment for the use of violence or unlawful threats against a person or group of people on the basis of their ethnic, national, racial or religious status. Article 257 punishes the insulting of a person or group of people in public because of their national, ethnic, racial or religious affiliation. Article 256 specifies penalties for incitement of racial or ethnic hatred. [16i][57b]

6.65 ECRI and the International Helsinki Federation for Human Rights have expressed concern about various reports that the police did not react appropriately to racially motivated crime; that they responded slowly and their investigations were inadequate. The 1999 ECRI Report also noted allegations of police violence and abuse directed at members of the Roma community. The Polish authorities have responded to the ECRI report by stating that, in all cases of reported crimes against Romanies, active police efforts were launched immediately to clarify the circumstances of the offences and to identify the offenders. They also noted that reported cases of police officers violating regulations or breaking the law are monitored and subject to disciplinary proceedings. Police officers found to have committed violations against criminal suspects have been punished severely - from disciplinary discharge, to prosecution and conviction in a court of law. [3]

Roma: Education

6.66 According to the 1999 ECRI Report, most Roma children do not complete primary schooling. Education for these children often ends at the age of twelve, and cases of illiteracy are not uncommon. [5][3]

6.67 In the majority of cases Roma schoolchildren are in integrated mainstream classes, together with other Polish schoolchildren. [5][3] Other Roma pupils attend one of about 30 separate remedial classes, or so-called 'Romani classes', offered by some schools under the Initial Teaching Programme for Roma - for the first three years of schooling. This programme was initiated by a priest, Father Opocki, in 1991 and adopted by the Ministry of National Education in 1992. It is justified by the Education Ministry on the basis that, because of a poor command of the Polish language, economic disadvantage, parental illiteracy and other factors, many Romany children are behind their non-Romany counterparts when starting school; accordingly, the aim of this programme has been to prepare Roma children to continue their education, from class IV, in integrated classes. Roma leaders have criticised 'Romani classes' as being discriminatory and 'inferior', though some Roma communities are in favour of them. [58][3] In the Pilot Programme in the Malopolska Province during 2001 - 2003, the Government is providing for intensive support to Roma children within integrated classes, rather than having separate 'Romani classes'. [57a]

6.68 A high percentage of Roma children do not attend school on a regular basis. Polish authorities are of the opinion that Roma parents do not attach due importance to schooling and generally underestimate the value of education to their children. [57a][3] Roma participants in an Open Society Institute 'Roundtable' in Warsaw contended that one of the principle reasons Roma children drop out of school at a young age is discriminatory treatment by teachers; according to one, Romani parents believe it is 'better for their children to earn a living than to face pressure, tension and discrimination in school'. [53]

6.69 The Ombudsman, in July 2001, was reported to have called for the implementation of institutional and long term solutions in Roma education, which took account of the history, specific culture and traditions of the Roma community. He expressed the opinion that the low level of education amongst Roma was not only the result of attitudes and lifestyle, but was also caused by a lack of initiative in this area on the part of the Polish authorities. Professor Zoll added that there was currently a shortage of qualified teachers with a knowledge of Roma languages. [8s]

6.70 The Pilot Programme in the Malopolska Province makes education a priority. It includes, amongst other things, financing of pre-school (zero-class) education for Roma children, Polish remedial classes, after-school activities in mixed groups, and the employment of Romani support teachers and assistants. [8s][58]

See also paragraph 6.33

Roma: Unemployment and Social Welfare

6.71 Although there are no official unemployment statistics by ethnic group, several sources acknowledge high rates of unemployment among the Roma. A report prepared by the National Labour Office in 1999 found that no more than 43 per cent of Roma surveyed indicated employment as a source of income for their families. [53][57a] Estimates by Roma leaders put rates of unemployment at 90% in both Krakow and Tarnow, and as high as 99% in Nowy Sacz. According to an Ombudsman's report, the level of Roma unemployment in the area of Czarny Dunajec reaches 100%. [53]

6.72 Polish authorities stress that unemployment among Roma is directly related to their low level of education and lack of job-related qualifications, and insufficient knowledge of the Polish language. Other contributing factors include the overall high rate of unemployment in Poland (currently over 17%), the restructuring of industry and the collapse of state-owned enterprises where Roma have been employed in the past, and the disappearance of traditional Roma occupations such as smithing, horse trading, etc. [57a]

6.73 According to the 1999 ECRI Report, disadvantage in the labour market is also frequently attributable to discrimination and prejudice, as well as to past discrimination in access to education and social inequality. However, "little information appears to be available on the possible extent of discrimination in the field of employment, be it statistical information about unemployment levels among the various minority groups, or caselaw pertaining to the relevant provision against discrimination in the labour code". [3] In responding to the ECRI Report, Polish authorities have stated that the 1994 Law on Employment and Counteracting Unemployment prohibits discrimination on the basis of nationality or ethnicity, as regards access to employment. [3]

6.74 Article 32 of the Constitution provides that no one shall be discriminated against in economic life for any reason whatsoever. [50] Article 11 [3] of the Labour Code of 1996 prohibits any form of ethnic or racial discrimination in labour relations - however, it is difficult to evaluate the efficacy and scope of this law because it has, as yet, only been invoked in a limited number of cases. [53] The Constitution (Article 67) stipulates that any citizen who is involuntarily without work and has no other means of support, shall have the right to social security, the scope of which is specified by statute. [50]

6.75 Long-term unemployment is particularly acute among Bergitka Roma in the south-east. The government's 2001-2003 Pilot Programme in the Malopolska Province provides funds for occupational training, creation of subsidised workplaces, and various other projects. [57a]

6.76 According to the explanatory report for the Pilot Programme, the overwhelming majority of Roma living in the foothill areas of the Malopolska province live on social welfare. In 10 gminas of the province inhabited by Roma, 75% of Roma families received or still receive benefits, and in some gminas various forms of support are granted to over 95% of families. Welfare support includes cash allowances, and in-kind assistance such as fuel and meals paid for school-attending children. However, because of rent arrears, Roma families are often ineligible for accommodation allowances. [57a]

Roma: Housing

6.77 There is generally an acute shortage of dwelling units in Poland. In December 2000 it was estimated that close to 1.5 million Polish families did not have their own lodgings. [10h]

6.78 Although housing conditions for Roma are varied and should not be generalised, many Romany families, often with a large number of children and several generations, live in overcrowded apartments that are badly in need of repair. Access to public utilities and other amenities is, in many cases, shared among large numbers of residents. Inhabitants in some communities, particularly in the south-east, live in small, makeshift, hastily constructed houses, or sometimes in sheds or old railway wagons - in conditions of high density and often without adequate sanitation. Some Roma (and other Poles) reside in former barracks. [57a][53]

6.79 The provision of housing is the responsibility of the local (gmina) authority. [16i] According to Roma leaders and advocacy groups, there have been cases of discrimination against Roma families by local officials with respect to housing. For example, in a move disproportionately affecting Roma, the Tarnow housing authorities demanded the eviction of around thirty families in 1999 on the grounds of irregular rent payments, apparently regardless of their condition. [53] There have also been instances where local non-Roma residents have protested the housing of Romanies in their neighbourhood, on explicitly racist grounds. For example, in March 2001, in response to public discussion of proposals to provide public housing for Roma, residents of three villages sent a letter to the mayor of Lacko, stating: "We, the undersigned residents, do not agree to build a Roma community on municipal plots, owing to the lack of guarantee that new arrivals from other places will not settle [...] Roma do not want to help themselves, are onerous neighbours, are degenerate [...] and are riddled with diseases such as jaundice and tuberculosis which can spread to other members of our municipality". [53]

6.80 The Pilot Programme in the Malopolska Province in south-east Poland provides funds for repairing existing dwellings, building new low-income or subsidised apartments, connecting Roma settlements to water and sewage systems, as well as for various other projects. [57a]

Ukrainians and Lemkos (Ruthenians)

6.81 The Ukrainian and Lemko minority makes up approximately 300,000 of Poland's population; this figure includes an estimated 50-60,000 Lemkos (Lemkowie). Ukrainians in Poland are dispersed over a number of different regions of the country as a result of the forced resettlement of the majority of them in 1947. [20b]

6.82 Within the Lemko community, there are two historically competing 'ideological' camps on the question of Lemko identity: some Lemkos consider themselves an ethnographic group within the Ukrainian minority, while others maintain they constitute a national minority separate from the Ukrainians. [20b][16i] They are respectively represented by the "pro-Ukrainian" Union, founded in 1990, and the "pro-Rusyn" Lemko Association, founded in 1989. [10d]

ANNEX A

POLITICAL ORGANISATIONS

Under the 1990 law, political parties are obliged to file for registration, but by April 1995, a total of 272 parties had been registered. In January 1998, however, the number of registered parties operating in Poland had declined from 360 to 60, as a result of new regulations, according to which existing parties had to apply for re-registration by the end of 1997, presenting a list of 1,000 supporters instead of the previous 15. The principle ones are Alliance of the Democratic Left (Sojusz Lewicy Demokratycznej - SLD): Warsaw; f. 1991; electoral coalition of Social Democratic Party of the Republic of Poland (SdRP), the successor party to the old Communist Party, and the All Poland Trade Unions Alliance. Transformed itself into a political party in 1999. Won 216 seats in the Sejm in the September 2001 elections and formed a centre-left governing coalition with Union of Labour (UP) and Polish Peasants Party (PSL). Leader: Prime Minister Leszek Miller.

Civic Platform (Platforma Obywatelska - PO): A centrist ('liberal conservative') political movement formed in January 2001 by Andrzej Olechowski (runner-up in the 2000 presidential election), Sejm speaker Maciej Plazynski from the AWS, and deputy Senate speaker Donald Tusk, who left the Freedom Union following its December 2000 congress. They were joined by several hundred former members of the Freedom Union, including Warsaw mayor Pawel Piskorski, former prime minister Jan Krzysztof Bielecki, and a number of members of parliament who initially sat as independents. Secured 65 seats in the Sejm in the September 2001 election.

Civic Forum-Christian Democracy (FO-Chd): Formed by former Deputy Premier Janusz Tomaszewski when he left the AWS. Lech Walesa's Christian Democratic Party of The Third Republic later joined it: Walesa is Honorary Chairman of the FO-Chd. Its programme is based mainly on economic issues. Currently no Sejm seats.

Freedom Union (Unia Wolnosci-UW): f. 1994 by merger of Democratic Union (Unia Demokratyczna - UD) and the Liberal Democratic Congress (Kongres Liberalno-Demokratyczny - KLD). Suffered a damaging split at its congress in December 2000 after Leszek Balcerowicz stood down as leader after only two members of the 'neo-liberal' wing of the party, comprising mostly former KLD members, were elected to the 100-member national council. Several prominent people left the UW and joined the Civic Platform, as did hundreds of other UW members across Poland. Former foreign minister Bronislaw Geremek was elected the new UW leader at this congress.

German Minority of Lower Silesia (Mniejszosc Niemiecka Slaska Opolskiego): Leader: Henryk Krol. Guaranteed 2 seats in the Sejm.

Law & Justice (PiS): This right-wing group was founded by former Justice Minister Lech Kaczynski, and his brother, to contest the September 2001 elections. Its main activists are members of the former Centre Alliance. The most important parts of its manifesto is its fight against corruption, harsher penalties for criminals, and financial transparency in public life. 44 seats in the Sejm.

League of Polish Family (LPR) : Formed two months before the 2001 elections, the LPR groups far-right politicians - including several close to Radio Maryja, an ultra-nationalist Catholic radio station. Chairman: Marek Kotlinski. 38 Sejm seats in 2001.

Movement for the Reconstruction of Poland (Ruch Odbudowy Polski - ROP): f. 1995, and has experienced several splits and changes since then; right-wing; Chairman: Jan Olszewski. In May 2001, ROP and AWS agreed to run on a joint list in the September 2001 elections, to be called Solidarity Election Action-Right (AWS-P).

Polish Peasant Party (Polskie Stronnictwo Ludowe - PSL): f. 1990 to replace United Peasant Party (Zjednoczone Stronnictwo Ludowe; f. 1949) and Polish Peasant Party-Rebirth (Polskie Stronnictwo Ludowe-Odrodzenie; f. 1989); exists mainly to represent the agricultural community ; 200,000 members. Won 42 seats in the Sejm in 2001. Formed a governing coalition with the Social Democrats (SLD) and Union of Labour (UP) after the 2001 parliamentary election. Leader: Jaroslaw Kalinowski.

Samoobrona (Self-Defence): Founded in 1992, initially as a protest movement for farmers in debt after the post-1989 economic reforms. As one of three farmers' unions, Samoobrona staged road blocks and other aggressive protests against Poland's pro-EU policies but, in 2000/2001, adopted a more formal political structure - and won 53 seats in the Sejm in the 2001 election. Has styled itself as the voice of Poland's hard-pressed farming community, as well as of small business and the urban unemployed, but remains populist and Eurosceptic. Leader: Andrzej Lepper.

Social Movement Alternative (RSA): A Catholic-nationalist, Euro-sceptic party, the main aim of which is to change Poland's economic direction. Chairman: Thomas Karwowski.

Solidarity Election Action (Akcja wyborcza Solidarnosc - AWS): founded in 1996; as a centre-right electoral alliance of some 36 parties.

In May 2001, Solidarity Election Action of the Right (AWS-P) was formed of those parties and groupings which remained from the old AWS ruling party after the Conservative Peasant Party, Christian National union, AWS Social Movement and Polish Christian Democratic Alliance had left it. Leader: Former Prime Minister Jerzy Buzek . Failed to secure any seats in the Sejm in the 2001 election.

Union of Labour (Unia Pracy - UP): f. 1993; a social democratic party. Leader: Marek Pol. Contested the 2001 parliamentary election in a coalition with the SLD, and subsequently became part of the governing coalition.

Sources: [1a, 2a, 33b, 17f]

ANNEX B

CHRONOLOGY OF KEY EVENTS

1950s - 1970s

Serious anti-regime riots occurred.

Summer of 1980

Further strikes led to the birth of Solidarity under the leadership of Lech Walesa.

December 1981

Under heavy pressure from the Soviet Union and Warsaw Pact, the Prime Minister General Wojciech Jaruzelski introduced martial law. Walesa and many others were interned.

July 1983

Martial law was lifted under pressure from the West.

1988

New strikes took place as the economy collapsed.

April 1989

The Round Table Accords legalised Solidarity and instituted political reforms in support for unpopular economic measures.

June 1989

Solidarity won the elections with a sweeping victory and humiliation for the ruling parties and Tadeusz Mazowiecki became Prime Minister.

December 1989

The legislature voted to rename the country the Republic of Poland.

December 1990

Walesa decisively defeated Mazowiecki in the Presidential elections.

1991

Poland signed an Association Agreement with the EC.

October 1991

Poland's first fully democratic post-war general elections were held. A right-wing Solidarity government was formed with Jan Olszaeski as Prime Minister.

June 1992

A vote of "no confidence" in the government was approved by the Sejm.

July 1992

A new centre right coalition headed by a Solidarity lawyer, Ms Hanna Suchoka, was approved by parliament.

May 1993

The government lost a vote of "no confidence".

19 September 1993

General elections took place in which left wing parties won a substantial victory. The new government was a coalition of the SLD and the PSL led by Waldemar Pawlak.

February 1994

Poland signed up to NATO's Partnership for Peace (PfP).

April 1994

Poland submitted its application to join the EU.

February 1995

Political and economic tensions led to the resignation of Pawlak. Jozef Oleksy became the new Prime Minister and formed a new government.

January 1996

Olesky resigned after being accused of co-operating with the Russian Secret Service well into the 1990s.

March 1996

Former Justice Minister, Wlodzimierz Cimoszewicz (SLD) was appointed Prime Minister and formed a government.

November 1996

Demonstrations were staged at the Gdansk shipyard in an attempt to secure government loan guarantees in order to secure the completion of an existing contract. Poland joined the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD).

February 1997

Further strikes took place, which were supported by Solidarity.

2 April 1997

The National Assembly adopted a new Constitution.

21 September 1997

Parliamentary elections marked a return to power for the parties based around the Solidarity trade union. Solidarity Elections Action (AWS), a coalition of right-wing and trade union groups, secured a third of the vote.

17 October 1997

The new Constitution came into force.

11 November 1997

The Sejm approved the programme of the new government, led by Jerzy Buzek as Prime Minister.

30 March 1998

EU accession process formally launched.

April 1998

The Concordat, a treaty regulating relations between the government and the Vatican came into effect.

1 September 1998

New Criminal Code and Code of Criminal procedure came into effect.

11 October 1998

Local government elections took place.

January 1999

Four major reforms introduced: local government; pensions; health care and education.

12 March 1999

Poland was admitted as a full member of NATO. Government reshuffle took place

April 1999

Significant reform of state administration took place.

September 1999

Large protests in Warsaw against the reform of the health, education and pension systems. Demands for the Prime Minister to resign.

11 October 1999

Solidarity Electoral Action (AWS) and the Freedom Union (UW) renewed their coalition agreement.

May-June 2000

The Freedom Union (UW) threatened to withdraw from the government on 23 May in protest at the Prime Minister's failure to control rebellious factions in Solidarity Electoral Action (AWS). Talks between the two parties failed and the UW resigned from the Government on 6 June. AWS formed a minority government on its own.

October 2000

Aleksander Kwasniewski re-elected President of Poland

January 2001

Civic Platform (PO) founded.

23 September 2001

Parliamentary elections: The centre-left SLD - UP coalition, with 41% of the vote, secured 216 of the 460 seats in the Sejm - 15 seats short of an absolute majority. The new Civic Platform (PO) won 65 seats in the Sejm, while the parties of the previous government - Solidarity Election Action (AWSP) and the Freedom Union (UW) - both failed to qualify for any seats. In the Senate, 75 of the 100 seats went to SLD-UP.

9 October 2001

Leaders Leszek Miller of the Democratic Left Alliance (SLD), Marek Pol of the Union of Labour (UP), and Jaroslaw Kalinowski of the Polish Peasants' Party (PSL), signed a policy agreement which was to be the basis of a coalition government.

19 October 2001

Parliament convened and the new coalition government of Leszek Miller was sworn in.

ANNEX C

PROMINENT PEOPLE

Head of State

President: Aleksander Kwasniewski (Re-elected October 2000)

Current Government

Prime Minister: Leszek Miller (SLD)

Deputy PM & Finance Minister: Marek Belka (SLD)
Deputy PM & Infrastructure Min. Marek Pol (UP)

Deputy PM & Agriculture Minister: Jaroslaw Kalinowski (PSL)

Interior Minister: Krzysztof Janik (SLD)

Foreign Affairs Minister: Wlodzimierz Cimoszewicz (SLD)

Defence Minister: Jerzy Szmajdzinski (SLD)

Labour Minister: Jerzy Hausner (SLD)

Treasury (Privatisation) Minister: Wieslaw Kaczmarek (SLD)

Health Minister: Mariusz Lapinski (SLD)

Education Minister: Krystyna Lybacka (SLD)

Culture Minister: Andrzej Celinski (SLD)

Economy Minister: Jacek Piechota (SLD)

Justice Minister: Barbara Piwnik (Independent)

Environment Minister: Stanislaw Zelichowski (PSL)

Science & Technology Minister: Michal Kleiber (SLD)

SLD = Democratic Left Alliance; UP = Union of Labour; PSL = Peasant Party

[33e] 20 March 2002.

Other prominent people

Jerzy Buzek: Former Prime Minister (to October 2001).

Bronislaw Geremek: Chairman of Freedom Union (UW)

Jaroslaw Kaczynski: Chairman of Law and Justice Party (PiS)

Jaroslaw Kalinowski: Polish Peasant Party (PSL) Chairman

Marek Kotlinowski: League of Polish Families (LPR) Chairman

Andrzej Lepper: Leader of Samoobrona

Andrzej Olechowski: Joint Chairman of Civic Platform (PO)

Jan Olszewski: Chairman, Movement for Reconstruction of Poland (ROP)

Maciej Plazynski: Sejm Speaker. Joint Chairman of Civic Platform (PO)

Marek Pol: Union of Labour (UP) party Chairman

Szero Rom: Title of the traditional leader of the Polska Roma

Donald Tusk: Joint Chairman of Civic Platform (PO)

Lech Walesa: President of Poland, 1990 -1995. Nobel Peace Prize, 1983. Andrzej Zoll
Commissioner for Civil Rights Protection (Ombudsman)

REFERENCES TO SOURCE MATERIAL

[1] Europa Publications

(a) Europa Yearbook 2000

(b) Central and South-Eastern Europe, 2002. 2nd Edition.

[2] Foreign & Commonwealth Office (FCO), London.

(a) Polish Political Parties, August 2000

(e) Communication from the FCO, Warsaw, 18 March 1996

(i) Poland: Background Brief, by the FCO, January 1998.

(j) Registration in Poland, FCO, London, 9 June 1998

[3] European Commission against Racism and Intolerance; Second Report on Poland, adopted on 10 December 1999. Strasbourg 27 June 2000

[4] US State Department

(a) Report on Human Rights Practices for 2000, issued February 2001

(b) Background Notes: Poland, Bureau of European Affairs, June 2000

(c) Report on Human Rights Practices for 2001, issued March 2002.

(d) Background Notes: Poland, April 2002.

[5] Roma in Poland: Extract from the Office for Culture of National Minorities Report of 1996

[6] JPR/Policy Paper (Institute for Jewish Policy Research): The Roma/Gypsies of Europe: A Persecuted People, 3 December 1996 (extracts).

[7] Poison from the Pulpit: Newsweek, 24 November 1997.

[8] PAP News Agency, Warsaw:

(a) Polish Interior Minister appeals to minorities over general census, 27 February 2002.

(b) Polish agrarian leader fined for insulting President, 30 January 2002

(d) Vetting court begins work, 24 February 1999

(g) Premier says budget includes health reform funds, 25 November 1997

(h) Justice Minister sacks two prosecutors in wake of first vetting list, 3 March 1999

(i) Exhibition on annihilation of Romanies to open at Auschwitz, 13 March 2001

(p) Banned priest not to deliver sermon on Independence Day, 9 November 1997

(q) Polish Senate approves Ombudsman's appointments, 28 June 2000

(r) Polish citizen can also be a citizen of another country, 20 July 2000.

(s) Situation of Polish Romanies "dramatic" - Civil rights Ombudsman, 18.07.01

(t) Polish President stresses important role and prerogatives of upper house, 20 October 2001.

(u) New lower house speaker and deputy Speakers elected, 19 October 2001

(v) Left coalition, agrarians, set goals for future government, 9 October 2001.

(w) Polish government wants to double funds to combat unemployment, 27.02.02

(x) Prosecutor starts investigation into deputy Speaker's allegations, 30.11.01

(y) Romanies appeal to Polish media to show them in a better light, 12.12.01

[9] International Helsinki Federation for Human Rights

(a) Human Rights in the OSCE Region, Report 2000 (Events of 1999): Poland

(b) Human Rights in the OSCE Region, Report 2001 (Events of 2000): Poland

[10] Reuters Business Briefing

(a) Polish MPs scrap Death Penalty in new Penal Code, 6 June 1997

(b) Polish Ministry sets up unit for monitoring of "destructive sects". Text of a report by Polish Radio, 28 June 2000

(c) Conference on Religious Sects in Opole, 20 October 1997

(d) The Lemko question in the Polish Press, 1987-1993. (Polish Ethnic Group), 3 October 1997

(e) Polish leftists win Warsaw municipal elections, 28 September 2000

(f) Polish Peasants agree to join coalition government, 6 October 2001

(g) Holiday-making Roma families attacked by youths, 21 August 2001. (PNB)

(h) Poland: Housing construction still in bad shape, 11 December 2000 (BOSS)

(i)

[11] The International Lesbian and Gay Association, World Legal Survey: Poland. Website: http://www.ilga.org/Information/legal_survey/europe/poland.htm accessed on 22 August 2000

[12] Letters from Tomasz Wardyski, Honary Legal Adviser to the British Ambassador, Warsaw.

(b) 12 June 1996

[13] Background UNHCR note on Roma Communities in Central Europe, 20 September 1995

[14] The Untouchables - a report to the UNHCR by Mark Braham, March 1993.

[15] Roma/Gypsies: A European Minority by Jean-Pierre Liegeois and Nicolae Gheorghe for the Minority Rights Group International.

[16] United Nations Reports:

(a) Commission on Human Rights, Report of the Special Rapporteur on the promotion and the protection of the right to freedom of opinion and expression on the mission to the Republic of Poland, E/CN.4/1998/40/Add.2, 13 January 1998

(b) Committee against Torture, Consideration of Reports submitted by States parties under Article 19 of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, CAT/C/25/Add.9, 28 June 1996

(c) Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, Consideration of Reports submitted by States parties under Article 9 of the International Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Racial Discrimination, CERD/C/304/Add.36, 15 October 1997

(d) Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, Reports submitted by States parties under Article 9 of the International Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Racial Discrimination, Poland, CERD/C/299/Add.10, 27 February 1997

(e) Human Rights Committee, Consideration of Reports submitted by States parties under Article 40 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, Poland, CCPR/C/95/Add.8, 14 March 1997

(f) Implementation of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, E/1994/104/Add13, 7 January 1997

(g) Human Rights Committee, Consideration of Reports submitted by States parties under Article 40 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, Poland, CCPR/C/79/Add.110, 29 July 1999

(h) Committee against Torture, Consideration of Reports submitted by States Parties under Article 19 of the Convention, CAT/C/SR.415 and 419, 10 -12 May 2000.

(i) Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD), Report submitted by State Party under Article 9 of the Convention. CERD/C/384/Add.6, 27 September 2001.

[17] Keesing's Record of World Events:

(a) Restoration of citizenship for Jewish émigrés, March 1998;

(b) New leader of Polish Socialist Party - Announcement on number of political parties, April 1998

(c) Local elections, October 1998

(d) Prime Minister's refusal to accept resignation of ministers, May 2000

(e) Withdrawal of Freedom Union from government - Government changes, June 2000

(f) Presidential election, October 2000

(g) Presidential veto of enfranchisement bill, September 2000

[18] Information of the Legal Department of MON [Ministry of National Defence] with regard to queries from the Consular Section of the British Embassy in Warsaw of 3 December 1997.

[19] Letter from the Main Headquarters of the Police (KGP), Warsaw, 1 September 1997 regarding the activity of the Police against the Romany - Polish Citizens in Poland.

[20] Helsinki Human Rights Foundation (Warsaw):

(a) Report of September 1997 on Polish Roma

(b) Minority Rights in Poland, September 1999.

[21] Letter from the Ombudsman's Office in Warsaw, 7 July 1997

[22] Report by the School Superintendent's Office concerning the social and educational state and methods of implementation of compulsory school attendance of the Roma in the area of the Nowy Sacz School Superintendent's Office.

[23] Summary of the Work of the Know How Fund Polish Police Programme, W. Fenton, MBE, Know How Fund Adviser to the Polish Police, 25 November 1997

[24] TV Polonia satellite service, Warsaw:

(c) New rules for graduates' military service come into force, 13 November 1999

(d) President says new Polish government faces biggest challenges since 1989, 19 October 2001.

(e) Parliament shortens national service, 19 March 1999

(f) President defends existence of Polish second chamber, 20 October 2001

[25] Letter from the Polish Ministry of National Defence, 27 January 1998.

[26] BBC Monitoring Service:

(a) Defence Ministry Bill aims to combat worsening discipline in Polish Army, 2 September 2000

(b) Polish radical agrarian leader gets suspended court sentence, subject to appeal, 15 March 2002 (Polish Radio)

(c) Poland Government aims to protect Polish Language by Law, 24 July 1998

[27] EU Commission: Regular Report on Poland's Progress towards Accession

(a) November 1998

(b) October 1999

(c) November 2000

(d) November 2001

[28] Rynki Zagraniczne (Polish newspaper):

Report shows increase in Polish and foreign organised crime, 26 February 1999

[29] Agenda 2000: The European Commission Opinion on Poland's Application for Membership of the European Union

[30] Polish News Bulletin Company (PNB)

- (a) How did a Free Market Change the Poles?, 4 June 1998
- (b) CBOS Poll: 65 Per-cent for Professionally Army, 22 May 1998
- (c) Polish Language Law enters into force, 17 May 2000
- (d) Jerzy Buzek meets ethnic minorities, 29 June 1998
- (e) Civic Platform shakes up Polish political scene, February 2001
- (f) Lepper thrown out as Sejm Speaker after heated debate, 30 November 2001
- (g) Poland - Draft Law on Ethnic Minorities, 20 February 2002
- (h) Government to support Ethnic Minorities Act, 28 February 2002
- (i) Poland: Child labour, 8 August 2001
- (j) Government moves forward with intelligence services reform, 20.02.02

[31] War Resisters International: "Refusing to bear arms", 1998.

[32] A report on the situation of Gypsies in Poland prepared for the Gypsy Council and Romany Guild by the Romany Institute, Dr Donald Kendrick, July 1997

[33] Economist Intelligence Unit

- (a) Poland Politics - Key Players to Watch, 1 August 2000
- (b) Poland Country Report, March 2001
- (c) Poland Country Profile, 2000.
- (d) Poland - Country Outlook, 5 October 2001.
- (e) Poland - Political Structure, 20 March 2002
- (f) Poland - Key developments, 13 February 2002.
- (g) 'Government under strain over EU farm aid', 19 February 2002
- (h) 'Surveys show Poles still support EU membership', 6 March 2002

[34] <http://www.poland-embassy.si/eng/> Polish Embassy website (Slovenia), content as at 14 April 2001

[35] 'Women 2000: An Investigation into the status of Women's Rights in Central and South

Eastern Europe and the Newly Independent States', International Helsinki Federation for Human Rights

[36] Council of Europe Press Service

(a) Poland ratifies the Council of Europe Protocol abolishing death penalty, 30 October 2000

[37] European Roma Rights Centre, Roma Rights, No3 of 2000.

[38] Advice from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office / the British Embassy in Warsaw.

[39] Republic of Poland: Sejm website: www.sejm.gov.pl, content as at 17 May 2001.

[40] Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty:

(a) 'Education Reform launched at start of new school year', 7 September 1999.

(b) 'Left Alliance takes over', 2 October 2001

[41] The World Bank in Poland, www.worldbank.org.pl, 'Will polish education reform improve education quality and efficiency?' (extract). No 5 of 1999.

[42] European Observatory on Health Care Systems, Health Care Systems in Transition, Poland report for 1999.

[43] CNN - IFES: Results of the Parliamentary elections of 23 September 2001.

[44] Newsweek International

(a) 'Poland: Politics on fast forward - Why pre-1989 memories fade and Poles vote left', 8 October 2001.

[45] Financial Times

(a) 'Election result may deal blow to Poland's EU hopes', 25 September 2001.

(b) Polish leader loses his immunity, 28 January 2002

[46] Interfax News Agency

(a) Social Democrat Miller sworn in as new PM, new government set to move fast to tackle public finances, 19 October 2001.

[47] Polish News Bulletin Company (PNB)

(a) 'Jedwabne - Questions about the past and the future', 26 July 2001

[48] Letter from the Consulate General of the Republic of Poland in London, re: Polish Citizenship Act, 19 October 2001.

[49] 'Polish Citizenship': PolskInternet.com: Information supplied by the Consulate of the Republic of Poland, Washington DC.

[50] Constitution of the Republic of Poland.

[51] Canadian Immigration and Refugee Board (Research Directorate)

(a) POL29916.E 'Whether a person eligible for military ...', 26 August 1998

[52] The Gypsies in Poland by Jerzy Ficowski (book). ISBN 83-223-2321-2.

[53] Open Society Institute, 'Minority Protection in Poland', 2001.

[54] www.poltrade.lv Embassy of the Republic of Poland, Latvia

[55] www.poland-embassy.si Embassy of the Republic of Poland, Slovenia, 'Selected indicators of the Polish economy', 31.03.02

[56] Amnesty International:

(a) Poland Report, 2001 (events of 2000)

[57] Ministry of the Interior and Administration:

(a) 'Pilot Programme for the Roma Community in the Malopolska Province for the years 2001-2003' (Explanatory Report), February 2001.

(b) Website - www.mswia.gov.pl

[58] Report commissioned to the Roma Cultural Centre in Tarnow by OSCE/ODIHR: 'Addressing the Challenges of Romani Children's Education in Poland - Past and Current Trends and Possible Solutions', 2001.

[59] BBC News (website)

(a) Poland wins land battle in Brussels, 21 March 2002

[60] CENT Brief: Update on European Union accession negotiations', 11 June 2001

[61] Local Government in Poland by Andrzej Kowalczyk (excerpt)

[62] European Court of Human Rights: Chamber Judgements

(a) No. 704, 4 October 2001

(b) No. 855, 15 November 2001

(c) No. 968, 18 December 2001

(d) No. 979, 20 December 2001

[63] Center for Reproductive Law and Policy: Report on Poland, October 2000.